Dedication

DR. A. HOLLIS EDENS
President of the University

In the field of college yearbooks there is an unwritten law concerning Dedications. It advises that an annual never be dedicated to a new president until he has had time to prove himself. In its last two issues, the Chanticleer has respected this custom. And this 1952 edition is no exception.

Dr. A. Hollis Edens came to Duke toward the end of the 1948-49 academic year, at a time when he was vitally needed. He came to us at the mid-point of his career—a career marked by success and characterized by a meteoric rise from the obscurity of the Tennessee mountains, through various positions in Emory University and the University System of Georgia, to a high place in the educational circles of the South and the nation.

His first two years as President of Duke were spent largely in putting over the top the University Development Campaign, which sought $8,650,000 for "Brains, Books—then Bricks." At the same time he was orientating himself in his new job and making new friends.

Since the successful completion of this huge drive, Dr. Edens has this year turned his full attentions to the pursuit of his primary interest, which "has always been with the students and their faculty," and of his desire "to know as many of them personally as possible."

We dedicate this 1952 Chanticleer to President Edens in recognition of all that he has done and will continue to do in the best interests of the University. But more than that, we dedicate it to him with the knowledge that he is indeed a President for and of the students.

Foreword

Without any desire to pat ourselves on the back, nor any danger of suffering from swelled heads, we, the staff of this 1952 CHANTICLEER, feel that you, the rest of students, have taken more interest in this book this year than in the past. We do not suffer from the delusion that your attitude is one of eager anticipation, but that it is rather one of curiosity. You have seen us running around taking pictures of you, compiling information about you, and generally getting the lowdown on you, for more than one semester. With some of the things we have done with you and to you, you shared little sympathy. But in general you have gone along with us, either out of blind faith, or more probably because there wasn't anything else you could do. But these changes that have aroused your curiosity during the year, and the many others of which you are just now learning—these changes have been brought about for a very definite purpose.

We feel that the CHANTICLEER should tell a story—a story of you and of Duke during one year. There are many ways of going about this, but few of them would result in anything but a mere pictorial directory. We therefore approached the problem with the idea of setting up a relationship between the school and its students, between the place and the people, between Duke and you. This we continued throughout every phase of campus life, attempting always to show just what you did and where you did it.

We want this 1952 CHANTICLEER to be a book that you will read and look at from cover to cover, not merely refer to from time to time. We want you to read it from page one, and what's more important, we want you to enjoy it, because it is completely and wholeheartedly for and about you.

Administration

East Duke is the nerve center of the Women's College. Here the Administration wheels effectively and efficiently operate a complex machine. The work is accomplished by a scaled division of labor. The deans, the staff, the college officials each have a job to do. From their offices come contributions, parts to the whole. The offices, the files, the records in this well-regulated workshop are all tools to create the mechanism. The people at the master controls see that the various parts gear in together, act in harmony with the whole. It is a complicated nerve center, but an ordered one. Every activity on East Campus stimulates it and brings forth a response. It is above, into, and encircling every phase of the Women's College.

Sandwiched between the West Campus Union and Page Auditorium is the center of the University Administration. Commonly and erroneously called the Administration Building, it is actually a part of the two buildings that enclose it, a connecting link between them. Compactness does not infer inadequacy of organization or action, however. This three story corridor houses much of Duke's internal workings. It is the supreme headquarters of the University. Within its walls sit the rulers, the planners of Duke, the power and the mind of this community.

When the new Administration Building is completed, there will be ample room to spread out and increase the mechanism of administration. The deans and University officials will claim a building and offices equal to their importance. Into the discarded stepchild will move the publications, student offices, and recreation facilities. It will go back to the students. The new building therefore enlists the interest of all.

DESK OF Vice-President Charles Jordan is evidence of complex work involved in University administration.

ADMINISTRATION, ADJOINING WEST CAMPUS UNION, IS HEART OF UNIVERSITY MACHINERY.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY Dr. A. Hollis Edens has directed much time and effort to successful completion of development campaign.

The Duke student is held in the powerful hand of the administration. He must go to it to pay his bills, to register activities, to obtain sanction for his acts, to learn whether he is passing or failing. The administration is the authority in all matters. It seeks and welcomes our suggestions, our ideas, but in the final analysis, it passes the judgment and the student must accept it and submit to it.

The administration realizes we are mature individuals, however. It has encouraged the development of student government. It has eased a lot of the responsibility and initiative onto our shoulders, and is willing to gradually surrender more when we have proven ourselves capable of accepting trust and carrying out obligations.

The administration seeks to acquire better understanding between the three levels administration, faculty, and students. Perhaps the only thing that increases the gap between us and the faculty is the fact that they have obtained an inestimable amount of knowledge in their individual fields. They are experts; we are only beginning to imperfectly grasp the whole situation. And yet they invite our friendship. They have many interests outside the confining classroom and study; many interests that we hold in common with them. A relationship is established that is mutual admiration and friendship.

Our relations with the administration usually consist of many detailed duties that we think of as necessary red tape. We stand in long lines to register, to sign up for rooms, to pay our registration fees. These are just surface relations, however. They don't show the countless opportunities of establishing close relationships with the administration.

Encouraging better student-faculty relations, the administration approves the various committees set up to talk things out with faculty and administration. When the problems of the honor system and the cut system came up, the administration invited discussion and examination of all sides of the questions. Students, faculty, and administration met on common ground and tried to reach some reasonable conclusion.

Too often we think of the administration as the ruling, unchanging order of this community. True, they have the authority and the power, but they don't exhibit this autocratically. They respond to reason, to increased knowledge of a problem. The administration officials know that the secret of not breaking is to bend with the wind when it is found to be reasonable and right.

FIVE DEANS ADVISE THE STUDENTS

Although you may not always admit it, the feeling that you're not entirely left to your own devices, that there are five men who stand constantly at your disposal when you need them, is a reassuring one. When you have a problem that needs solving, you can be sure that their time is yours. On the other hand, when you get into some scrape that you'd rather not have them know about, they are almost sure to send you a summons.

These men are important to you, for their job is to aid you in your job— the business of acquiring an education. They were all students themselves once, and they have a pretty good idea about how the student mind works. At the same time, they know the channels and intricacies of administration. They know what should be done, and they know how to go about doing it. They exist for a reason, and that reason is you.

ADMINISTRATION HALLS ARE CROWDED DURING REGISTRATION.

HERBERT J. HERRING, Dean of Trinity College, is general supervisor of work done by Administration.

ROBERT B. COX is Dean of Undergraduate Men. His advice is songht by all the upperclass students.

ALAN K. MANCHESTER, Dean of Undergraduate Studies, is at present on leave working in South America.

JAMES M. SLAY, an important link in Duke's chain of command, is the Assistant Dean of Trinity College.

WILLIAM ARCHIE, Assistant Dean in charge of Freshman Instruction, helps frosh with course problems.

ROBERTA F. BRINKLEY, Dean of Woman's College, teaches English Lit. She received her A.B. from Agnes Scott College, her Ph.D. from Yale.

EAST'S HOUSE COUNCILORS HAVE TEA IN GILES PARLOR.

MARY GRACE WILSON is Dean of Residence. One of her jobs is to approve all campus social functions.

DEANS, COUNCILORS HEAD EAST

From the bustling offices of East Duke Building, five deans and numerous staffs direct the goings on of the Woman's College, with its thousand coeds. From the time you're interviewed as a high school freshman 'till the time you emerge as a graduate, these women advise you, help you, and keep tabs on you. Together with the house councilors, they constitute the powers that be on East.

ELLEN H. HUCKABEE, Associate Dean of Undergraduate Instruction, received A.B. and M.A. from Duke.

MARIANNA E. JENKINS, Associate Dean of Undergraduate Instruction, is also assistant professor of art.

MRS. J. FOSTER BARNES directs the Woman's Glee Club. Mrs. Barnes has led the Glee Club for twenty-seven years. She trains students for Chapel Choir and solo parts.

Woman's Glee Club provides singers for Chapel Choir

If you pass East Duke on Tuesday evening, you will probably hear strains of music as a hundred talented young women raise their voices in harmony. They are glad to see the Men's Glee Club go on tour because then they can sing in the Sunday Chapel service. They also form the Living Christmas Tree and a selected few join the men for the presentation of Handel's Messiah.

The Glee Club is, in Mrs. Barnes' words, "a training ground." New members sing out with might and main, hoping they will be discovered and Mrs. Barnes will open wide the gates to the Choir, Hoof 'n' Horn productions, or the Triple Trio. The girls in the club are usually there for the pure enjoyment of singing in a group, and if you're lucky enough to be in it, you will listen to the "tweet" of Mrs. Barnes' familiar whistle, signaling the time to stop chattering and get down to business.

Liberal Arts

The haunt of the patrons of the finer things of life, Asbury is set apart from the main quadrangle of East campus. Headquarters of the Aesthetics, Art, and Music Departments, this graceful old building is a symbol of the fine arts. Two of the thousands of feet that daily cross the doorsill may be those of a future Picasso or of an aspiring young Toscanini. In the classrooms are piles of frayed scores and even more frayed instrument cases.

Trills and arpeggios echo through the listening halls, in spite of the soundproof practice rooms in the basement. Enthralled students cluster around a phonograph, listening to records from the extensive music library. Pictures are displayed on the walls. Here Duke endeavors to train talent in the fine arts, and here it displays the fruits of its endeavors.

They occupy the working minutes of our lives at Duke. In their classrooms we learn the accumulated knowledge of the ages. West Duke, Carr, Social Science, Divinity, and Gray, are signposts along our road to wisdom. Across from its twin, West Duke in all its gray brick splendor guards the entrance to the Women's Campus. Carr bustles with activity when the bell rings between classes; its halls are polished by a multitude of feet every day. On West, next to the new, rapidly rising administration building is time honored Social Science, where classes are carried on in a battle with carpenters and bulldozers for supremacy of the sound waves. Together, Divinity and Gray are on the right of the Chapel, sometimes resting beneath its shadow. These are Duke's centers of Liberal Arts, her strongholds of the humanities.

WEST DUKE on East Campus contains classrooms, offices for English, philosophy, history, psychology departments.

CARR BUILDING, East Campus, contains classrooms for liberal arts courses, offices for language departments.

SOCIAL SCIENCE, predecessor to new Physics Building, holds economics and sociology departments, ROTC units.

IN GRAY AND DIVINITY BUILDINGS ARE SCHOOL OF RELIGION OFFICES, CLASSROOMS, WDBS STUDIOS.

HOW DREAMS ARE BORN

Liberal Arts expose us to ideas and ideals of world

Life is built on dreams and hopes. It is built on the ideals that spring from the seeds of thought. The thoughts of men living now—or ten, or thirty, or three hundred years ago. It is built on the ideals of men that believed in a god, men that believed in an idea. It is the realization of one's own thoughts and one's own ideals. It is the acceptance or rejection of new and contradictory ideals.

When students come to college many of them are able, for the first time, to throw off the swaddling-clothed ideals that have bound them since they were born. They learn the meaning of the word "think," and they begin to look for the whys and wherefores of their own objectives and ideals, and they find out why others differ from them. Through literature, and through philosophy and religion they can see where some of their ideals originated and why they originated. They learn the meanings behind their own beliefs and those of others. They learn to understand and to tolerate, to accept and reject according to their own interpretation of knowledge.

RECORD LIBRARY in basement of Asbury Building on East Campus is primarily for students taking music courses, but use of the valuable collection is open to all.

They learn the sickness of dogmatism and the beauty of the active mind. They learn their own capacities for appreciating and comprehending the natural beauties and those born of the human minds They learn to take the core of life—that stuff which will give reality to their dreams—and build on it.

A line of poetry, a stroke of an artist's brush, a theme of a symphony, or the thoughts of men who lived and died searching for an ideal, may drop like a seed in the student's mind, take root there, grow and flower. Some day it might, in turn, be written down—another plank on the platform of life.

A common bond of fellowship and service joins Kappa Chi members

D.U.'s Zeta chapter of Kappa Chi, national pre-ministerial fraternity, meets weekly to hear speakers, laymen or preachers, with the aims of getting to know each other, developing a spirit of brotherhood, and better understanding their dedication to religion and service. Eighty students are eligible for the honorary led by Henry Clark as president. They entertain dates at square dances and cabin parties. Since last year the fraternity has especially worked to start other chapters of the religious organization.

KAPPA CHI affords divinity students chance to make practice sermons, using the pulpit in York Chapel.

give students an display talents

Let us suppose that we have gathered in a great room four of Duke University's outstanding musical organizations, where we can find out what makes them tick and a little of what they accomplished this past year.

The first corner is full of many weird and wonderful noises, for here is the Concert Band, composed of extroverts with strong eardrums among the student musicians. Although forced into retirement by the marching band during the football season, the rest of the year they blast forth in all their glory under the direction of Mr. Paul Bryan in lawn concerts, a formal concert, and a Sunday night sing.

A rather unusual sound is coming from the next corner, where, giving vent to their creative urge in a strong vocal manner, the members of the Madrigal Chorus are located. They sing, not to please any audience, not for applause or praise, but rather because they enjoy singing, and quite frankly don't care whether you like what they sing or not.

STUDENT MUSICIANS HAVE FUN WHILE ACQUIRING EXPERIENCE

In the third corner we see the Duke Symphony Orchestra, a top-flight symphonic group which affords the students and faculty an opportunity to saw or blow away to their heart's content. This year their schedule was so full with four concerts that the conductor, Allan H. Bone, had to increase rehearsals from once to twice a week. The trend towards reliance more on student than faculty talent is represented by the fact that this year the concertmaster was a student, William Zerby, who also doubled as concertmaster of the Chamber Orchestra.

This sedate orchestra, located in the last corner, contains the best and only the best of the string players from the Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Bone, as if he weren't already busy enough, conducts this orchestra, too. Here superior players may congregate to display their virtuoso abilities. Word spread this year how good they really are, with the result that late-comers to their January and May concerts had to be expert wall climbers to find room.

Put all these people together and they make quite a din, but everybody's happy, including the audiences that hear these talented groups perform in their individual concerts.

Music Study Club sponsors student recitals, analyzes musical score

They have a keen interest in music. They provide a receptive audience for talented students, faculty members, and townspeople who give substance to their creative ability. Before each concert, some member of the group analyzes and interprets the form, style, and meaning of the work they are about to hear. In this way, the Music Study Group increase their knowledge of music and its varied forms—opera, piano works, voice numbers, chamber music, and orchestral accomplishments.

These music enthusiasts gain great enjoyment from their biweekly meetings. They like to share their pleasure with the entire university community by bringing to this campus one of the maestros on the concert series. Proud of the budding and developing talent within our midst, the club presents in annual recital the girl of the year who has shown the most out outstanding proficiency in music.

Sigma Delta Pi honors top Spanish students

"Buenos Dias, amigos!" is the greeting of the Sigma Delta Pi's. These are the people who can answer yes to the question "Habla usted Espanol?" They have gone beyond the stilted classroom style to carry on meetings in halting but enthusiastic Spanish. Gaining a better idea of Spanish customs and traditions, they have been able to add a bit of Spanish color to the Duke campus. The Union is transformed into a bit of old Spain when they gaily participate in lively folk dances and games.

At Christmas they break pinatas at a party celebrating La Navidad in the Spanish style. In the spring these Sigma Delta Pi's forget American life and ideas and lose themselves in the good spirits and merriment of a typical Spanish fiesta. "Hasta La Vista!" Common interests in French join Tau Psi Omega members

To those students mired deep in French 1-2 classes, the members of Tau Psi Omega are envied beings. These lucky people, having long ago mastered such details as when to use de and when to use du, all develop nasal twangs during their bi-monthly meetings and leave the English language behind. Monday nights they occupy their own table in the Union. With the department of Romance languages they sponsor a French play, en Francais, naturellement. Tau Psi Omega also holds open houses for prospective members. The society has a claim to fame in being the first chapter of a national organization which was founded here in 1938 by the advisors, Dr. and Mrs. Dow.

Alpha Kappa Psi delves in industry and high finance

"Gentlemen, tonight we are honored to have as our guest speaker Mr. Finley White, president of the Whitehall Furniture Company. Mr. White will address us on the problems of starting a business, the management of finances, the skills needed, labor relations, and the necessary market." Thus begins a meeting of Alpha Kappa Psi, the professional business fraternity on campus. When they are in serious moods, they tour leading businesses, show industrial movies, and entertain eminent speakers. When they are out to have a good time, they hold dances and dinners to impress the fair sex and stag parties to impress themselves.

While working degree, NROTC also prepared

For five hours a week you're in the Navy. Your rank is midshipman, not quite an officer and not quite an enlisted man. You're in the learning stage, and for those five hours you learn about the Navy.

Three of those hours are spent in the classroom. You navigate on dry land, read about weapons, study damage control diagrams, look at pictures of machinery, watch movies on seamanship. You're exposed to a lot, and you absorb more than you are sometimes inclined to think.

toward regular midshipmen are for commission

For the other two hours you drill, handle a rifle, manual of arms, cadence count. Your outfit gets to look pretty snappy, and you put on a dress parade. When the weather is bad you go inside. You handle equipment, get a little closer look at the real thing.

It all fits together. You're not a trade school boy, nor are you a ninety-day wonder. You're far from knowing it all, but you've got an idea of what it's like, and what comes later will be easier.

In the summer comes the real taste. You live in, handle, operate, see first hand, the things you've been studying about from books and films.

As a sophomore or senior regular you go to sea for eight weeks, wear a uniform, visit foreign ports. You become a going part of a going Navy. A mistake costs you ten and two, but it's a lesson well learned, and you won't forget it when a little more is at stake than demerits.

As a junior regular you hit Pensacola and Little Creek for a good look at Naval flying and the amphibs. You put in a couple of hours in the air, make a couple of landings on the beach, watch a shore bombardment, and see how a pilot is trained.

As a senior contract you make your first cruise, usually to Gitmo. You're a little fouled up, but it doesn't take long to get squared away, and you soon know what the regulars have been talking about.

It's first hand experience, and it sure helps out when you graduate with that Ensign's stripe.

THE FLY-BOYS

Air Force ROTC students train for reserve commission upon graduation

Now completing its third year on the Duke campus, the Reserve Officers Training Corps of the United States Air Force has shown phenomenal growth. The original group of forty students has now swelled to six-hundred and fifty. The first squadron has multiplied to a present total of sixteen.

During their four years in college, the AFROTC members undergo an extensive training program. While freshmen, they study political geography as well as the customary drill. A series of general aviation courses—air navigation, aerodynamics, meteorology—is given to the sophomores. During their junior and senior years, the men usually specialize in some advanced field. During the course of this four year period the cadets gain a basic knowledge of air science and learn much in the areas of leadership and responsibility.

A particular aspect of the Air Force program is the staging of special aerial flights, for not all the information can be learned in class. Both aerial photography and aerial navigation, necessary aspects of flying education, are concentrated upon during the year.

Aside from the strictly educational curriculum of the AFROTC, a diverse number of activities adds variety to the program. Designed to recognize and develop leadership and co-operation among the members, the Arnold Air Society is a national club constituting an important aspect of the AFROTC. Through a series of riflery contests the unit's rifle team is selected and competes in national matches. While to add purely social life, the Air Force Club provides many forms of recreation. Science

This year's graduating seniors saw the erection of the newest building on the campus. Even though young in years, the Physics Building has matured quickly and has already achieved goals in the scientific realm. It is only proper that this building is modern and up-to-date; within it work the great minds of physicists who need the latest equipment. Looking at it from the outside, one can not guess that this calm brick building is a dynamic one. Here the secrets of the universe are being explored and the relation of matter and energy is being clarified. After the Vandergraff accelerator to be used in nuclear research has been installed, this building will be an important center of scientific research and discovery.

It stands near the Hospital. It belongs there; it is closely allied to it in its field of work and in its interests. It is the Chemistry Building. Up its wide front steps and through its massive doors pass many future chemists and doctors. There in its lecture rooms and in its laboratories students find out if they can grasp the meaning of organic and qualitative analysis and if they are qualified to continue in the pursuit of science. Within its rooms many catch the light, the inspiration of science; many leave this building with determination to delve further into the mysteries of the test tube or to use human beings as their laboratory. Therefore this building is a testing ground; it can also be a stepping stone.

Biology is the study of life, and in the building devoted to it the Zoology and the Botany departments hold sway over the minds of its students. One observes, experiments, draws conclusions about the animal world; the other centers its attention upon the plant kingdom. It too is close to the Hospital, and faces the Chemistry Building across the Quadrangle. The three of them form a center of science.

On East Campus, the Science Building houses classrooms, laboratories, and lecture room for four branches of science—zoology, botany, geology, and psychology. This building is a busy place all day for both coeds and the men. Also on East is Bivans, headquarters of the Psychology Department. Within its brick walls experts study and experiment with the human mind and its behavior. These fine buildings represent the students' almost limitless opportunities to pursue the complicated study of the natural sciences.

CHEMISTRY BUILDING, located at the north end of men's campus, houses labs, lecture rooms, and a fortune in scientific equipment for the many chemistry courses.

SCIENCE BUILDING on East Campus has laboratories, lecture halls for most of women's science courses, faculty offices. Headquarters for Geology Dept. are located there.

BIOLOGY BUILDING, situated on West Campus Main Quadrangle, provides a large lecture hall, classrooms, laboratories, and offices for Zoology, Botany Departments.

BIVANS BUILDING on East Campus is headquarters for Psychology Department. It contains, besides classrooms and offices, a nursery school run by the department.

Science majors seek the tangible

IRVING E. GRAY, head of Zoology, examines beetle under a microscope.

The scarred tables in the laboratories are diaries of students that have gone before. Many are the broken test tubes and the shattered flasks. In the same manner the mistaken ideas and suppositions of the ancients are being torn apart by the scientists of today.

These young, scientific minds are forever searching, testing, questioning. Eagerly they learn the principles; eagerly they put them to the test.

Theirs are the acid stained fingers, the aprons with holes; theirs are the squinted eyes and the rounded shoulders. But they don't mind spending long hours in the laboratories; for theirs also is the thrill when a successful experiment is concluded.

Pre-Meds pool their knowledge to gain Medical school

Practically every person at Duke thinks that he is taking the toughest course that the University offers, from the engineer to the business major, and the pre-med is no exception. Long hours in laboratories with a tough schedule give some justification to their opinion. Certainly the fact that 22,000 medical undergraduates apply for only 7,000 available places in the nation's med schools is no comfort to the Pre-med.

Their chief problem is getting in medical school, and it was partially to help solve this problem that the Duke Pre-Medical Society was organized. Meeting twice a month, the society presents many phases of medicine to the pre-meds to help them in selecting their future field. It also is concerned with establishing a closer relationship between the Med School faculty and undergraduates. All of these things help the pre-med student in a tough, uphill battle.

MATH AND AFTERMATH

Pi Mu Epsilon constitutes top honor

For those who delight in integration and differentiation and to whom the curve $y=e^{x^2}$ is a sight of beauty, there was founded at Duke in 1932 the local chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon. If imaginary numbers intrigue you and you know that Horner's method isn't the manner by which Jack picks his forecasts, this is the club for you. Membership requirements are a B average through integral calculus plus an overall B average. To reach integral you start out with algebra. Dazed a little by this course, you stumble into trigonometry. Then you stagger through analytic geometry into differential calculus. After this course is finished with you, you finally come to integral.

Meeting four or five times a year including initiations, the members of the society hear speakers on mathematical subjects and settle such questions as the shortest path for a cow who wants to get a drink at the river and then go straight to its barn. Ah, yes, math can indeed be fun.

Engineering

Second only to the Hospital in size, the Engineering Building is somewhat apart from the main University quadrangle, but yet within the shadow of the Chapel. Built of Colonial-style architecture because of its great adaptability to the functional requirements of engineering instruction, the red brick, symmetrical building belies the bustling dynamic activity which is always going on inside. Here in modern, pastel colored classrooms, brilliantly flooded with fluorescent lighting, the engineers work under ideal conditions. A model steam plant and a high voltage lab provide the students with some necessary practical experience. Built in the form of an 'E,' the building is divided into three parts with the civil engineering in the middle, the electrical in the west wing, and the mechanical in the east.

ENGINEERING: FORMULA AND FUDGE FACTOR

Duke's Slide Rule Charlies are a class unto themselves

DR. WILLIAM H. HALL, Dean of Engineering College, took Engineering Degrees at Duke, Michigan, Wisconsin.

There hadn't been many worries when you left home to enter Duke; you were going to be an engineer. It was as simple as that. After the first few weeks that confidence had slowly dwindled, and there was little doubt that you had a long road ahead. Nineteen and twenty hours every semester, long labs with their endless reports, and tedious homework kept you busier than some of the more fortunate Trinity College students. By the end of the first semester, the ranks of the engineering students were considerably thinned; some changed their majors; others failed out of school.

By the beginning of your sophomore year you were beginning to become adjusted to the exacting work. There was a feeling of belonging as you decided what branch of engineering you would pursue: mechanical, electrical, or civil. Your classmates became more distinct and in time were your closest friends. Everything you did had some relation to your work. You began to take pride in being a part of the Engineering College. Everything that happened to you was connected with the Engineering Building. It became a second home, for you had your own magazine, class officers, societies, social organizations, and honoraries.

As a conscientious engineer you spent much of your time working, and the work was of a type that encouraged individual initiative while making teamwork necessary at the same time. In the junior and senior years most courses were taken in one building with one group of instructors, which tended to make you more familiar with instructors. Wonder of wonders, even the lessons seemed to become easier as you delved further and further into your chosen profession. More often than not the case wasn't that the lessons had become easier, but that you had learned what it meant to really study and to think. You were absorbing something called education.

Then in the spring of your senior year you found your whole career at stake. Interview followed interview. Your stomach quivered as you waited for each one, for your future job depended upon the impression you made with the prospective employers. Soon, however, it was over and you looked forward to putting what you had learned to work for pay. Your engineer's life had been hard work but scarcely boredom. When it was all over, however, and diplomas handed out, you could say, "It wasn't easy, but it was worth it."

The first Engineers' Show was held in 1926 in the basement of Asbury and consisted of three electric machines, a switchboard, and several testing instruments. Today the Engineers' Show has grown into a two-day open-house with thousands of visitors.

This year the Mechanical Engineering Department featured a miniature power plant, diesel and automotive internal combustion engines, cut-away engines, and a ram-jet. The Civil Engineering Department provided a demonstration of highway construction, complete with models and pictures showing the process of road building. The Electrical Engineering Department showed an electrical house of magic with an aluminum ring floating in mid-air and a proximity switch that set off an alarm when a spectator approached it.

Student branch of A.S.C.E. helps the civil engineer gain knowledge of field

Since 1933 there has been a chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers on the Duke campus. Each year a field trip is made, and Buggs Island Dam, Virginia, was visited by this year's group. Additional trips included the Du Pont Kinston Plant and Duke Power's Dan River Steam Plant. The student society invites representative speakers from their field to address them, to round out the program.

A.I.E.E. enlists students of electrical engineering

The Duke University student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was established in 1927 by Professor W. J. Seeley of the Engineering College. Its primary purpose is to keep its members informed about current developments in the field of electrical engineering. Practical applications of classroom theory are found on the inspection trips taken by the society.

At the meetings student and professional speakers are provided with an opportunity to discuss subjects pertaining to electrical engineering. These meetings stimulate close relations between the students and practicing engineers. The fact that the Durham Engineers' Club annually sponsors an inspection trip to Buggs Island for the A.I.E.E. members is proof of this relationship.

Highlights of the year included the fall meeting of the North Carolina section of the A.I.E.E., which was held at Duke University, and a social function in the spring semester.

LOGS & COGS

A.S.M.E. members see class room theories in practice

What will it be like to push our slide-rules and apply our "engineering judgement" for a pay check? One of the aims of the student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers is to help the members answer that question. Inspection programs acquaint the M.E.'s with the practical side of engineering. Competition was keen among the members who presented technical papers. The speaker taking top honors represented Duke at the regional meeting.

BRAIN WAVES

Order of St. Patrick members are top men in College of Engineering

The Order of Saint Patrick takes its name from the Patron Saint of Engineering. According to popular belief St. Patrick "drove the snakes out of Ireland," but the engineers claim this interpretation of the legend to be fallacious and that the true account reads, "St. Patrick drove stakes in Ireland," thus making St. Pat a civil engineer. On St. Patrick's Day and other occasions the members of the Order wear bright green bow ties in commemoration of St. Pat, the first engineer.

The Duke Chapter of The Order of St. Patrick was established in June 1945, and the Duke Chapter nationalized the Order in March 1951. The Order of St. Patrick chooses its members from the junior and senior classes on the basis of leadership, integrity, and contributions made to fellow students and to the College. The purpose of the organization is to recognize and encourage competent leadership in the College of Engineering.

MECHANIZED SCHOLARS

Top-ranking ME's enjoy membership in Pi Tau Sigma

Twice each year Pi Tau Sigma selects a few of the outstanding men in the junior and senior mechanical engineering classes to become candidates for membership in the national honorary.

In the selection of members emphasis is not only placed on high scholastic attainment, but character, citizenship, personality, and professional interest are considered as well.

Pi Tau Sigma also awards a prize to the outstanding sophomore of the previous year, serving not only to recognize his exceptional work, but also encouraging others to strive for higher achievement.

THE SUPERCHARGED

Tau Beta Pi members stand high in class, lead in outside activities

The primary requisite for admission into Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honorary society, is distinguished scholarship; but after the scholastic requirements have been fulfilled, the final selection is based on integrity, breadth of interest both inside and outside of engineering, adaptability, and unselfish activity. Tau Beta Pi feels that integrity of character transcends in importance scholarship, activity, and every other qualification. Under integrity is included honor and high standards of truth and justice.

Tau Beta Pi, although an honorary society, does not choose to exist solely for recognition of scholastic achievement, rather, it feels that it must perform some service to its Alma Mater. At Duke University, Tau Beta Pi takes an active interest in the affairs of the College of Engineering. It sponsors a student-professor rating poll, recognizes outstanding juniors, and co-sponsors slide rule lectures.

The highlights of the year are always the initiation banquets when the new initiates are introduced and the prize winning pledge essay is read. The winner of the fall contest was one of Tau Beta Pi's junior honor students, Douglas Climenson.

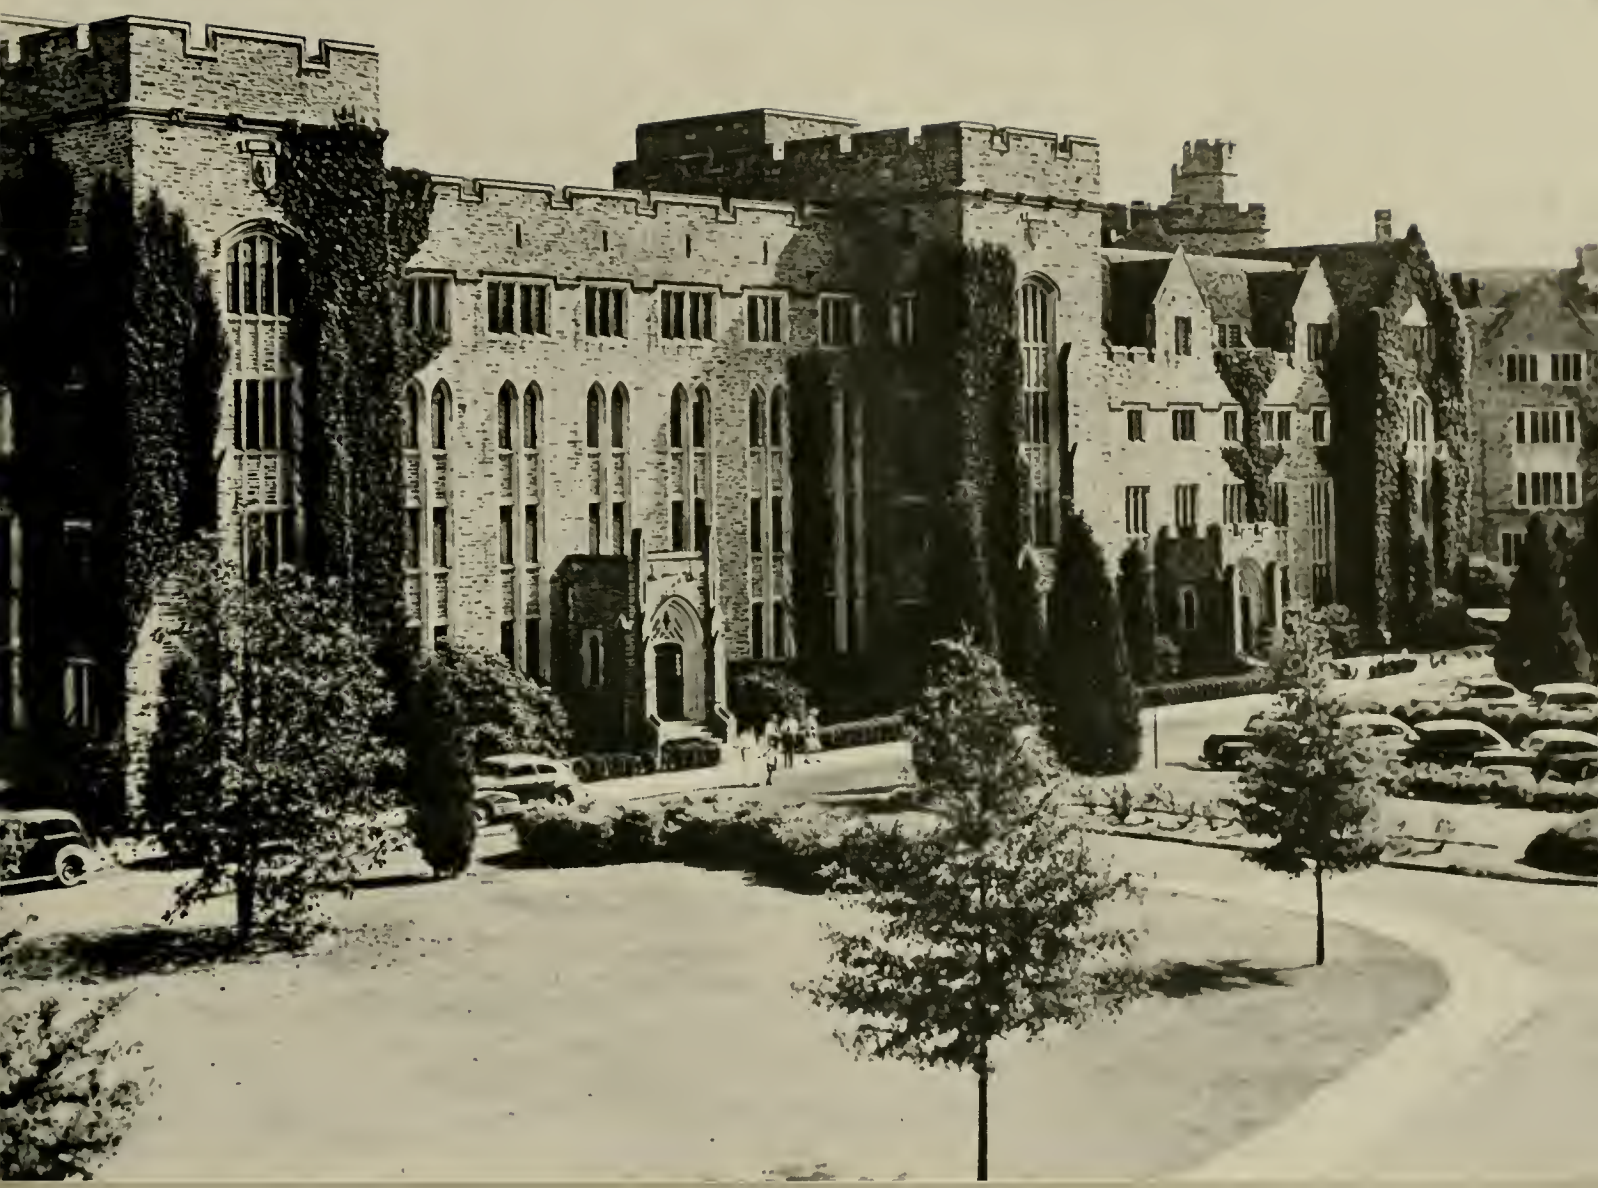
DukEngineer is quarterly publication

The fallacy that engineers are unable to write well certainly receves no support from the DukEngineer. Published quarterly, it is of interest to freshmen, upperclassmen, and alumni.



Hospital

"Medical Miracles" they call the Duke Hospital and Medical School. And miracles they are, too, as to plan, layout, and achievement. Standing at the north end of west campus, this huge, rambling building with its maze of confusing corridors was built with a specific purpose in mind—to be a great center in the South that would meet the medical, the scientific needs of the state and the nation. Through its doors have gone many people to their hundred destinies. Some to see their new-born sons, some to see their dying mothers, some to seek advice from renowned specialists, some to try to solve the mysteries of science in the research laboratories. The hospital has seen life ended, life begun, life improved, life prolonged

Chapel

Visitors to the campus see and admire it first. Photographers shoot it from every conceivable angle. Students live their daily lives in its shadow. Alumni remember it after all else has faded away. Its very size commands respect. Its beauty inspires awe.

The campus centers around it, as should our lives center around religion. The classroom stands close by it, as does learning stand close to religion. It is built on rock—solid, immovable, irresistible. It is both a challenge and a haven. It is a symbol of something that we feel inside but do not know how to express. It is a symbol of man reaching up for something above and greater than himself. It is the symbol of Duke. Indeed, the Chapel is Duke.

The carillon chimes out on Sunday mornings. The huge carved doors are open, voicing an invitation. Boys wait on the steps for their dates; on steps that have been hollowed out by the passage of many feet. Inside, the Chapel is bathed in warm tones of color. Sunlight strikes the stained glass windows and sifts through, forming patterned tapestries on the gray stone walls. The pews are cool and smooth. The choir, in black and white, lift their voices as the organ fills the arches with its booming tones. The minister commands attention and reception. His words strike deep and lodge there. Afterwards, the chimes sound three times in the quietness. There is a majesty present, a spirit of reverence. This is Sunday in the Chapel. This is Sunday morning at Duke.

The Chapel is a landmark. It is a signpost; a guide. It looks out over the buildings and campuses of Duke, over the tobacco factories of Durham, and sees all. It seems omniscient and omnipotent.

At night, spotlights create light out of darkness. Sometimes its reflection is thrown up against the clouds, framing a ghost chapel.

In spring and summer, the quadrangle is covered with groups of students and visitors listening to the songs of the bells. The Chapel comes alive. It seems to breathe and speak. The bells are tongues speaking many languages and are understood by all who come, regardless of race or nationality. It reaches out and touches eyes, ears, mind, and heart. It leaves an impression that is not soon forgotten. It seems to realize human needs, and fills the empty spaces in our lives. This is the Duke Chapel. It is indeed a living thing.

THREE FIGURES at right of the Chapel entrance are Thomas Jefferson, Robert E. Lee, and Sidney Lanier, representing Statesmen, Soldier, and Poet of the South.

The Student Religious Council coordinates the program of the student religious organizations and carries on projects of interest to all the groups. The Council sponsors projects like the International Tea, Interdenominational meetings, Leadership Training Conference, World Day of Prayer, Brotherhood Day Observation, and Vesper services. The membership, which consists of the presidents of all religious organizations and eight members-at-large, meets monthly.

Among the activities of the Baptist Student Union are intercollegiate and inter-racial meetings. At retreats at Ridgecrest each fall, plans are formed and BSU members are spiritually enriched. Delegates to the regional conference share ideas with representatives of other Baptist groups.

The Methodist Student Fellowship meets Sunday mornings to discuss the Christian faith and related problems, Sunday nights for a meditation hour, and Tuesday nights for a get-acquainted "Chat 'n Chew." MSF members also lend a hand in many fields of service and set aside times strictly for fun.

The aim of the Lutheran Student Association is to conserve the religious life of the students in the educational institutions of the church and other schools.

Besides meeting every week in the East Campus Chapel, these Lutherans conduct Student Sunday at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Durham. They meet Lutheran students of other colleges at a Tri-State Picnic every year. Their publication announces the schedule of meetings and group activities.

Meeting every Sunday night for a worship hour and every Wednesday for supper and an informal meeting, the Westminster Fellowship offers Presbyterian students fellowship, religious inspiration, and opportunities for service. The Supper Club programs are student led and include discussions of current Christian problems and social activity. There are many opportunities for social service work, such as giving parties at the Durham Day Nursery, visiting at Camp Butner, and teaching Sunday School at the Spastic Hospital.

The Canterbury Club participates in the wider phases of the campus-wide program, particularly through social services. These Episcopalians go to intercollegiate and state conferences besides carrying on a full calendar of worship and social events on campus. They also seek to follow the national program of the Episcopal Church, and take retreats for problem solving and fellowship.

Every Sunday morning the Canterbury Club holds a communion service in the Memorial Chapel inside the University Chapel. During the Lenten season, there is a communion service every Wednesday morning in the East Campus Chapel.

Not only student and graduate nurses but other hospital personnel and also patients, often in wheel chairs and sometimes on stretchers, attend the School of Nursing vesper services conducted every Thursday night. Led and accompanied by student nurses, the Nurses' Choir provides special music for these programs.

Every other Sunday night a group of faculty and students meet for dinner and a program. They form the Duke Unitarian Fellowship. Dr. Rhine and Dr. Phillip Handler have been among the speakers that have been invited to address them. A group of liberal thinkers, the Unitarians have included in their discussion programs the topics "Humanitarianism," "Humanism," and "Alcoholism."

The Newman Club seeks to provide an environment of Catholic culture for the students who have come from Catholic homes into a Protestant University. Since the program emphasizes fellowship with the other Catholics on the campus and with the sponsor, Father Francis Smith, and stresses the importance of religion's permeating every Catholic's life, membership is steadily increasing. Coordinating its religious and social program with that of the University, the Newman Club helps Catholics keep close to their Church while enriching their Duke life.

The name of the Jewish religious organization on campus, the Hillel Club, is somewhat misleading; for it is not a club in the strict sense of the word. The primary emphasis of the group is on the Friday night religious services; however, the social and cultural life is not neglected by the group, which is made up of nearly all the Jewish students on campus.

CHAPEL ORGANIST Mildred Hendrix plays at services and concerts.

They sing at the drop of a hat. It doesn't matter where or when—singly, in two's or three's, or more. They like to sing; it comes as naturally as does breathing to you and me. And never do they sing as they do when they're all together, when to the last man they're responding to Bishop's every gesture. In the spring, when they are nearest to perfection, they go on tour, appearing in concerts, on the radio, on television. Florida, New York—the nation hears them and approves. All of Duke tunes in, senses a twinge of pride, and says, "That's our Glee Club."

On Wednesday night they gather with the girls in the Chapel to practice for the Sunday morning service, for the presentation of the Messiah and the Redemption. The music swells, the walls reverberate. It's something to hear. In a special way they honor Bishop's twenty-fifth year.

Student Unions

Its red brick and round white columns make the East Campus Union look like a Southern mansion in all its pre-Civil War splendor. It faces its twin, the library, across a rounded quadrangle, and completes the perfect symmetry and poise of the Woman's Campus. Long before the sun rises behind it in the Eastern sky, the lights in the kitchen flash on and a rattle of pots and pans indicates that breakfast is being prepared to feed hungry Duke coeds before they run to 8:10's. All day and into the night there is a constant hum of activity in the two identical dining halls, with cafeteria-style counters and rows of wooden tables. For sorority pledge dances several times a year, the lobby is transformed into a beautiful dreamland. Then strains of soft music fill the air, silencing the usual clatter of silver and plates.

Dominating one side of the main quadrangle on West, the Union is perhaps the most frequented building of all. Following the Gothic plan of the Men's campus, this structure looks like it was created out of a heap of gray stones by more than human ingenuity and ability. Battlements adorn the top of the sturdy tower as if the building were placed in its central location more for the protection of the students in times of feudal warfare than for their use and enjoyment in twentieth century America. The walls that support the searching tendrils of shiny green ivy enclose an almost independent community that is in the middle of Duke life, a part of it, yet aloof from it. The first place everyone goes in the morning and the last stop made at night before going to the dorm is the P.O. The Barber Shop, the Book Store, and the University branch of the bank give Duke students a shopping center all their own. Jammed with people every time of the day or night, the Dope Shop is like Grand Central Station on a holiday. For the famished, there are the paneled University Dining Halls, the Oak Room, and the Snack Bar. Many student activities originate in the offices of Miss Garrard and Miss Pemberton. The Union is indeed the center of much campus activity.

THE SPECIFIC UNIONS

Student activities center about East and West Unions

Where do the majority of Campus activities center? What is the only place where you can get a haircut and a soda simultaneously; the only building through which nearly everyone passes at least once a day? Obviously the answer is the Union.

Headquarters of communications and publications, gathering place for groups and committees, resting place for momentarily unoccupied individuals, social center for dances, site for lectures, haven for the hungry—in some way these buildings constitute a part of the daily life of us all.

On East, the main function of the Union is to furnish food for famished females. The lobby serves any purpose from being a place to sip after-dinner coffee and discuss the latest gossip, to a meeting place for committees and discussion groups.

RUSH BREAKFAST of milk and roll in West dope shop between classes is daily procedure of many students.

IN THE UNION'S CAFETERIAS, students enjoyed Thanksgiving in an atmosphere of candles and tablecloths provided for the occasion. Despite all-out efforts of the staff, it lacked one ingredient to make it a real holiday—home.

AFTER GOING THROUGH CAFETERIA LINE IN UNION, COEDS PICK UP COFFEE, TEA, SALAD DRESSING.

DUKE'S BOOKSTORE is besieged each semester by well-intentioned students purchasing new tools of the trade.

EAST UNION PROVIDES WEST, UNION IS SELF-

West's Union, on the other hand, has attractions even for those plutocrats who are able to drive downtown for their meals. For what holds more fascination than the postoffice and the hope that someday that little box will contain something besides gathering dust? Life's trivial necessities are conveniently provided under this roof also: cigarettes, soap, candy, pencils, alarm clocks, the thousand and one small but vital things – the Union has them all.

COIN TELEPHONES by the Dope Shop are in constant demand. Location is convenient except for ever-playing juke box blaring nearby.

THANKSGIVING DINNER by candlelight presents an appetizing array of delicacies.

POST OFFICE LINES are common, since it is easily the most frequented spot on campus.

COEDS MOVING through East Union cafeteria are served noon meal. Raincoats reveal typical rainy school day.

MEALS ONLY, BUT ON SUFFICIENT COMMUNITY

The very gregariousness of man accounts for a great part of the Union's population. Duke's Student Unions are the most frequented four walls on campus. Votes are cast there, money drawn out and deposited, newspapers and magazines bought, telegrams received, stomachs filled, hair cut. All shapes, sizes, and varieties of notices and announcements are posted there with complete confidence that they will be read by each and every individual every day.

ON SUNDAYS, students settle in Union lobby to read news and funnies. Sunday papers come in from all over the East and North.

COEDS RELAX with coffee and cigarettes in overstuffed easy chairs of East Campus Union lobby. This is a common practice after dinner.

STUDENT LAUNDRYMAN climbs long steps from Duke Laundry, located in sub-basement of West Campus Union. Pick-up and delivery service is supplied to both campuses for student's convenience.

FACULTY CLUB holds a banquet in West Campus Union Dining Room. This is an annual affair which generally takes place before the beginning of Christmas vacation.

BRANCH BANK is one of Men's Union's many facilities for convenience of students. A busy spot at almost any hour, it is especially crowded before and after weekends.

You graduating seniors had better watch out or the Alumni Department workers will get you. Near the end of the year they send you the Alumni Register free for a few issues, and before you know what's happened, you've subscribed and you're hooked. However, even if you resist this subtle bait, you can't evade the requests for money. After all, the Alumni Department was instrumental in making a success of the Duke Development Campaign. Soon the engineers of this little plot, Mr. Charles A. Dukes and his assistant, Miss Anne Garrard, will have you back for Homecoming as full-fledged alumni.

SEAT OF JUDGMENT

Men's Student Government and its three-year-old offspring, Judicial Board, execute will of student body

PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN, Al Raywid, left, of MSGA and George Grune of Judicial Board discuss problem.

The Men's Student Government Association with renewed vigor and financial resources began to resume the ascendancy over campus affairs that it formerly occupied before the war. Their most notable accomplishment brought "America's Town Meeting of the Air" to Page Auditorium. Senator Robert Taft and John Scott of Time magazine also appeared here through their efforts. M.S.G.A. with W.S.G.A. sponsored a Town Meeting to air opinions on student government, an honor system, and the cut system. M.S.G.A. met with varying degrees of success attempting to obtain students' unlimited cuts and to keep the library open on Sunday nights. The other half of M.S.G.A., the Judicial Board, made recommendations for punishing violators of University regulations.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Y.M.C.A. serves the campus

Getting the jump on everybody else, the Senior "Y" Men scrambled all over West Campus, holding suitcases and answering questions for the incoming freshmen during orientation week. Thanksgiving weekend just wouldn't have been the same without the "Y" sponsored wheelbarrow race and especially the Chapel service. They also sponsored a Dungaree Jamboree, Mother's Day Chapel program, visits at the hospital, campus tours, and projects at Edgemont.

The sophomore "Y" cabinet, put on a talent show, sponsored a bridge tournament and a lost-and-found bureau, found homes in which the foreign students could stay during Christmas vacation, and sent Christmas cards to the maids and janitors on West. Last but not least, the freshman "Y" cabinet helped out on numerous occasions in furthering the work of the "Y".

TO BE WELL READ

Chanticleer, Archive and Chronicle flood campus with reading material

"PUB ROW" JANITOR rests before undertaking task of sweeping littered floor of Chanticleer Editorial Office.

Pub Row—home of Duke's printed word. There the staffs of three publications strive to please the world's toughest critic—the student. On an annual, quarterly, and weekly basis, they write about him and for him, play up to him and play down to him, shoot pictures of him, interest him, and bore him. The result: at Duke nearly everyone reads the CHANTICLEER, the Chronicle, and the Archive.

Once a year the CHANTICLEER crows out a record of the college year. All year long, writers, photographers, and all the other people who help to put together such a book work frantically. Completed assignments form the imposing stack that describes varied aspects of college life. The clicking of typewriters, fluttering of papers, and murmuring of voices constantly fill the room.

While the editorial staff molds material into finished form, the business staff works with dollars and cents. On both staffs, excitement and activity grow as the deadline approaches. The completed annual represents the labor of these students and the daily life of every student on campus.

ALL THE NEWS . . .

Weekly Chronicle keeps the campus informed of itself

Every Friday night the Chronicle appears. No matter what the reception, complimentary or disparaging, the Chronicle is more widely read than any other campus publication. Little does the average student reader realize the work that goes to make up his weekly newspaper. Assignments are handed out at the first of the week. Then all day and most of the night on Wednesday the paper is hurriedly assembled, layout planned, and copy and heads written. Thursday the printer goes to work and finally on Friday the Chronicle is circulated and for a few short hours holds the limelight.

A SEED SOWN

Archive affords creative writers chance to develop

The Archive office is found behind the quietest door on Pub Row. The door is seldom found open, or even unlocked, but by some strange and inexplainable phenomena, the "South's oldest literary publication" has never missed an issue. This year, in order to arouse more interest and to cultivate literary and artistic talent, the Archive has tried to reach further afield, asking faculty as well as students to contribute their work. It has used a more varied lay-out to make it more eye-appealing. The choice of articles, short stories, and poetry has also shown a further reaching editoral policy. The goal has not only been to appeal to more readers, but also to appeal to more contributors by running from light humerous short stories to intellectual research. The most important function is to serve as an incubator for young talent.

Who's Who gives recognition for noteworthy achievement

They never get together. They never do anything as a group. Their interests are widely separated. They have but one thing in common; they all head some organization on campus. Consequently they've been chosen for the college boy's Who's Who.

THE BARBARIANS

Duke Independent Society has made important strides during the year

Fifty-nine men on West Campus form the Duke Independent Society. The group aims at that much desired high scholastic average, at the same time encouraging members to participate in campus activities. While thus trying to achieve ultimate good on campus, D.I.S. manages to take time out for social functions. Even athletes have a chance to shine when intramurals begin. Another group takes its place in the ranks of Duke organizations.

DUE JUSTICE

W.S.G.A. rules East campus

The steering wheel of all East Campus activities, W.S.G.A. is the sounding board for new ideas and pet complaints. Through the work of Council and its auxiliaries, the co-ordinated machinery of student activities is efficient. The reorganized Judicial Board amends and modernizes the rules, pushes the establishment of an academic honor system, and handles trial procedures. Both strive for a greater degree of student government.

MEANS

and the Student guide East's morale

Working side by side with W.S.G.A., Social Standards and Co-ordinate Board do their best to keep East Campus on an even keel. While Social Standards does its best to establish good relations among the students, Co-ordinate Board acts as an intermediary between students and the faculty.

"Keep off the grass!" "What, no hose?" Familiar big words of the Social Standards Committee as they make every attempt to make East the epitome of good taste. The members are constantly on the run – planning social functions and publishing two books a year — "It's Not in the Handbook" for freshmen, and the Duke calendar.

Co-ordinate Board tries to find a common meeting ground for students and faculty. The big issue this year, the cut system, has aroused much interest and speculation.

CHARITY BEGUN AT HOME

Y.W.C.A. harkens to social calling

When you, the Freshman, jumped off the train, a Y girl was waiting to take you to your dorm and make you feel at home. During the following week, the Y sponsored open houses and an exchange dinner to help you meet the freshmen from West. Your contact with the Y did not end after Freshmen Week. You soon learned that there is a place for everyone in the activities of the Y. Perhaps you decided your field of service was at Edgemont or in the Durham Day Nursery. You experienced the true Christmas feeling by making toys for needy children. In the spring your mother was introduced to Duke life through the Y-sponsored Mother-Daughter weekend. You discovered that the Y was active all through the year, working hard and unselfishly on an almost limitless number of worthy and deserving projects both in town and on the campus. Indeed the Y religiously believes in beginning charity at home.

Auditoriums

It takes your breath away the first time you see it up the Quadrangle on East. Everything points to it. The other buildings lead your eye to it. It is the first building you recognize when you come back for class reunions. A symbol of the Georgian architecture predominate on the Women's Campus, it is beautiful in its symmetry of design, its brick, its white columns, its graceful rotunda. Framed with white snow and dark naked trees in winter, the auditorium is even lovelier in the spring when the sky is cobalt and the trees are ablaze with blossoms and new green leaves. The doors are open wide whenever there is an assembly, a sing, or a speaker. At night the lights flash on, beckoning students, faculty, and townspeople to take part in its activities. Its wide stone steps have felt many hurrying feet.

Over on West, in a building of Gothic architecture set in the middle of a cluster of buildings that resemble a medieval feudal castle, the important voices of the Men's Campus and of the nation are heard. Page Auditorium has played host to Senator Bob Taft, Patrice Munsel, and the First Piano Quartet, among others. Banners strung across the front doorway have announced the Hoof 'n' Horn Shows and the Duke Players' productions. Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are long lines in front of the box office waiting ro see Quadrangle movies. In the spring the walls resound with the deep, mellow harmonies of the Duke Glee Club, giving a premiere showing before starting on their nation-wide tour. The feet of many people of many groups on campus have worn the stone threshold smooth and curved.

Headquarters of Duke Players, Branson Building is behind Alspaugh on East. For its productions, Branson has a special theater-in-the-round.

These three auditoriums—Women's, Page, and Branson—are indeed the voice box of Duke. On their stages vital problems of the work and of the two campuses are discussed and decided, cultural programs are presented to enrich life and to give pleasure, and students prepare for their future life in a democracy through their participation in student government.

BRANSON BUILDING, small theatre and workshop for the Duke Players, is newest building on East. Most of their plays are done in this "Theatre-in-the-round."

PRESENTING...

Duke's three stages meet variety of student needs

IN ANNUAL FACULTY sing, Student Activities Adviser Fearing goes through some amusing antics with his fiddle.

Many are the times you have sunk back into the deep leather seats of the auditorium on East and have taken out your knitting needles and wool. As you clicked away on the argyles you had promised Bill last Christmas, you listened with one ear to the president of W.S.G.A. give reports and open discussion on such problems as the cut system, the WDBS transmitter on East, and aid to Edgemont. You watched the white hooded figure wind through the rows and tap the new members of White Duchy. Every Sunday night you and your date ended up the weekend at the Sing. You went to the lectures fully intending to count the squares in the domed ceiling, but the speakers were so interesting, and their topics were all on such subjects you knew you should be well-informed about, that you forgot about everything but listening to them.

You bought tickets for the concert series in Page and escorted your date down to the fifth row center where you could watch the ballet and the First Piano Quartet. You went out for a smoke during intermission and talked with professors and friends who looked considerably different from the way you remembered them in your 8:10 class. You went backstage after the performances and met Patrice Munsel and Frederic Gulda. Somehow you felt privileged to be able to speak to them as if they were old friends.

On both campuses the Freshmen hurried to class meetings every week. As the presidents pounded their gavels, a hush settled over the group who listened intently to the rules and ways of doing things at Duke. They heard the whys and wherefores of sororities and fraternities and the honor system. They were advised to wear their dinks and bows, to learn the traditions, and to get their requirements off. They became a part of Duke almost without realizing it.

Forum sponsors speakers

SPEAKER AND CHAIRMAN, Lord Bertrand Russell and Helen Eklund, chat during a reception following the British philosopher's lecture. Student Forum sponsored Lord Russell.

Each year the Student Forum committee brings leading personalities to the campus. Students choose the ones to be invited from a long mimeographed list submitted by the committee each spring. Students pay for them, entertain them afterwards, and meet them at the informal receptions. Students make up the main part of the audience, although a large group of townspeople and professors also attend.

There wasn't even "standing room only" when Sir Bertrand Russell, seventy-nine-year-old English earl, scientist, author, and philosopher came in the fall. The 1950 Nobel Prize for Literature winner had students, townpeople, and professors practically perching on the stage to hear him.

The educational program at Duke is supplemented by these speakers from all over the world. They represent varied fields of interest and are experts in their realms. The topics studied in the classroom take on new meaning when discussed by leading personalities and authorities. Duke students put aside books and forget extra-curricular activities for an evening of enlightenment and enjoyment with renowned speakers such as Pearl Buck, Emily Kimbrough, and Carl Sandburg.

FROM THE MASS ARISE A FEW

Ivy and Sandals honor scholarship, leadership among first-year coeds

Before the collegiate spirit fatally infects freshman girls, Ivy tries to indoctrinate them with the gospel of intellectual curiosity. Freshmen who squeeze a 2.25 average the first semester, or make that average by the end of the year, are initiated into Ivy.

Sandals are potential leaders of the rising sophomore class. They assist in orientation week, check roll in assemblies, and act as hostesses in the Ark. Dependability and versatility are touchstones to Sandals' success.

GOOD WILL WILL WORK

Pan-American Club cements relations

To achieve better relations with our neighbors down South America way, the Pan-American Club was established. The chapter at Duke seeks to arrive at a better understanding of South Americans, their culture, and their way of life through meetings conducted entirely "en español."

The club, under the guidance of their adviser, Senior Torre, is launching a cultural program of no small size, including colorful movies obtained from the Pan-American Union in Washington. Additional members are invited. The club welcomes suggestions and ideas for new and varied programs in keeping with their Pan-American theme.

DRAMATIC PERSONALITIES

For Duke thespians, Theta Alpha Phi

Besides other activities, Theta Alpha Phi is trying something different this year in the way of dramatic playreading, similar to that done professionally by the Drama quartet. Duke has the only chapter in North Carolina. It was founded here in 1928, six years after its organization at the University of Chicago.

ALL WORK OR NO PLAY

Duke Players set the campus stage

BACKSTAGE WORRIES show in face of player awaiting cue.

Some students sit and dream of the time they can be stars overnight on the Great White Way. Others do something about it. They get out and roll up their sleeves, developing their talents with the Duke Players. Actors and actresses experience first night thrills and chills in front of the glaring footlights and expectant audiences. Backstage all is confusion as make-up is deftly applied, costumes are changed, props are grabbed up, lights are dimmed or raised, and the prompter whispers in loud tones. The play is the thing! And everyone plays his part.

During the three major productions, there were some incidents that will never be forgotten. Buck Robert's punch line in "Room Service" of "That's all right, all all right, all rightie!" . . . Denny Rusinow's fame as a quick-change artist in "Twelfth Night" . . . the almost fatal plunge during the mock duel between Bob Grahl and Laurie Vendig. But always, in the true spirit of the boards, the play goes on.

FINALE OF THE HOOF 'N' HORN SHOW, BELLES AND BALLOTS, BRINGS DOWN THE HOUSE AS ELECTION

WORDS 'N' MUSIC

Hoof 'n' Horn Club presents semi-annual musical comedy

MAKE-UP IS RUBBED IN at last minute while chaos reigns before spring Hoof 'n' Horn show.

There is an electric stillness permeating every inch of the backstage. A quiet menacing terror creeps through the backs of people's minds. The questioning doubt of preparedness challenges every organ of the machine. Will the weeks of rehearsals, construction, and creative talents mesh themselves into a smooth working organism with every part doing its appointed job on "cue"?

It all started three months before—that is, when the Executive Council met and chose the Script to be used for the show. Then plans rolled into being. Students wrote and submitted songs and their wedded lyrics. Students designed sets, costumes, and lighting effects. Page Auditorium surged with activity.

Everyone was an individual and doing an individual job. It was there and he had a deadline to meet. Every now and then a voice would be heard rising above the multitude pleading for the eternal "Quiet." As the deadline approached, temperaments would sometimes show their ugly faces. Time has suddenly run out and there is no longer an opportunity to go over and polish anything. This is it.

Now there is no longer time for you to think. The curtain has gone up and you alone face your roommates, friends, and teachers combined to make the most critical audience possible.

Here is the challenge and to face it a battery of technicians and performers must rise from the ranks of amateurs and strive to meet professional standards The Hoof 'n' Horn show is on.

Libraries

Landmarks on both campuses, the libraries are the brain and thought channels of Duke. Into these buildings flow the ideas of the greatest thinkers of all time. Scientific discoveries, sociological research, and philosophical reasoning of men who were expert in their field, have been put down on paper and have been preserved for all mankind. Those who are curious or interested have only to finger through the card catalogue to find complete reference material on every subject. The stimuli are there; one has only to respond to them. Through the long, dark corridors, among the towering rows of stacks, the student seeking knowledge can wander at will, absorbed in a world of wisdom condensed in words on paper.

The library tower on West rises from the two spread wings and looks out over the classrooms surrounding it. Behind the tiny windows at the very top are offices of professors who courageously climb the steep stairs many times each day.

The arched stone doorway leads into a large, high-ceilinged room with a divided stone staircase. Here the maze of corridors converge; it is a starting point where one can get his bearing before he plunges into the stacks, or goes down the steps to the newspaper files, or buries himself in the reference room, or opens his book in the undergraduate reading room.

A contrast to the Gothic architecture of the library on West, the Women's library is a symphony of red brick and white column. The sun sinks behind it every evening, outlining it sharply against the Western sky. As the shadows lengthen, the lights flicker on. The building looks like a friendly southern mansion with its bright windows shining against the darkness. The porch lights burn until ten o'clock. When they are turned off and the gong booms, telling everyone it is time to leave, the long windows darken and the marble corridors settle into empty, expectant stillness.

RARE BOOK ROOM is one of newest and most beautiful additions to West Library. Besides plush furnishings, it contains a huge and valuable collection of rare books.

STACKS OF LORE

LOFTY LIBRARY OFFICES accommodate many professors. Here Dr. Hanson of the Political Science department formulates lectures, assignments.

MAIN DESK of East Campus Library encloses entrances to stacks, to which students have free access. This is a branch of main library on other campus.

When the dorms have raised their usual hum of confusion to a deafening roar and that term paper has to be handed in next Tuesday, you have taken off to the East Campus library. You either buried yourself in the Tombs or you settled down in a comfortable armchair in the Chinese Room. Pausing for a drink of water, you glanced into the adjoining room to see whose paintings were on exhibit. After you had searched for hours in the stacks for a book on witchcraft in New England, you finally asked the librarian's help. Every time the print started to swim before your eyes, you went out on the steps to take a break and smoke a cigarette. The library is more than a haven for the studious; it is a meeting place for the socially minded.

You walked by the library on West many times each day, going to classes, to lab, to R.O.T.C., to the hospital. Sooner or later you were forced to see how it looked on the inside, whether to do a paper, research work, outside reading—or just to look for someone. You found some students working earnestly, but many had yielded to temptation and had lowered their tired heads onto arms crossed over dusty reference books. When you finally conquered the endless reference material, you looked at your masterpiece with pride.

ACROSS CIRCULATION DESK on second floor of West Campus library pass all books to and from stacks, which students may not enter.

WE THE JURY

Bench and Bar keeps pre-laws busy

Duke's pre-legal society, Bench and Bar, is open to undergraduates who are interested in studying law. As a service to the students, many informed speakers are presented to tell inside facts about the law. By sponsoring a series of mock trials, the organization helps to prepare men for entrance into Law School and their profession.

MEMBERS are Dr. Bradway, Thompson, Lutton, Vanderberg, Sapiro, Ingersol, Featherston, Dalton, Whipple, Warner, Hoffman, Stewart, Schimmel, Rogers, West, Maxwell, Levy, Rich, Kuritsky, Bradshaw, True, Wallace, Rubincamp, McPhail, Blades, Getz, Moss, Pollock, Burka, Zimmerman, Akins, and Levenson.

Dormitories

They are spread out like parts of a huge castle in medieval times. To the casual observer they look cold and unfriendly, with their narrow, slit-like windows that admit only a few rays of light. One imagines that inside all is darkness—dim rooms and confining corridors. But this is only a half-truth, a misinterpretation. In these buildings are active, moving, living human beings that push the shadows into the corners with countless lamps of all description. The walls are far from cold-looking nor are the rooms unfriendly with clothes strewn over chair and bed, books and uke sharing space on a littered desk, cigarettes and coke bottles on the floor. These buildings have a life all their own that has to be fully experienced to understand their real vitality and warmth. They are the Men's Dormitories.

Through the large Gothic arches leading into the Freshman Quadrangle have passed many who were coming to Duke for the first time. They saw before them buildings carved majestically out of gray stone and topped with peaked roofs and towers. They walked along paths that had been hollowed into grooves by the feet of many that had passed that way before, grooves that would catch and hold the water when it rained. The grassy quadrangle would soon be ablaze with dots of blue—the Freshmen dinks. It would soon come alive and resound with the noise of bouncing basketballs, breaking coke bottles, and banging firecrackers.

On East in a more gentle, subdued atmosphere the Women's dormitories cluster in two orderly rows between the auditorium and the statue of Washington Duke. Landscaped with shrubs and hedges, these buildings form a contrast to the style and plan of the Gothic dormitories of the men. The brick and white columned structures seem to agree to the timeless theory that Southern women are gracious, hospitable, lovely. While the Gothic architectured West Campus fits the aggressive, dominant characteristics of men, the graceful Georgian scheme of East's dormitories seeks to mirror the feminine nature of their residents.

JOE COLLEGE DAZE

Revived tradition is wild success

Joe College Weekend! What does this mean to you? The vim, vigor, and vitality of college life plus the color and gaiety of spring all rolled into one wonderful week end. The dormant spirit of dear ol' Duke comes to life as the students go all out for fun. If the outside world ever had an idea of college life, it is depicted in Joe College Weekend.

In '51, Hoof 'n' Horn started the ball rolling with their hilarious production, Belles and Ballots. Enthusiasm reached its peak on Friday afternoon, as students converged en masse on East for a field day to end all field days. The atmosphere became vibrant! Coeds clad in skirts and blouses that put the rainbow to shame, men wearing white bucks, shorts, straw hats, and plaid vests—the stage was set. Contests of all kinds, followed by a picnic supper on the "sacred" grass and the Shoe 'n' Slipper dance completed a perfect day. West Campus had its turn Saturday as the students flocked to box lunches, a lawn concert, and varsity lacrosse, track, and baseball. Formal dress replaced "casual" clothes that night, as Duke's greatest weekend drew to a climax.

LIFE ON THE QUAD

In East and West dormitories there's seldom a dull moment

You are part of an active, moving, living community. Even though you gripe about it and wish for peace and quiet, you grudgingly admit you wouldn't give it up for the world. Sure, the days are crammed with history, air science, chemistry; but the minutes you'll remember longest are those spent with the guys next door.

DORMITORY LIFE on East includes satiation of appetites in first floor kichens, evidenced in icebox raid.

WHEELBARROW RACE competitor edges past opponent on Myrtle Drive in annual Thanksgiving Day event which concurs with football between Duke and U.N.C. frosh.

DUNKING SCENE is periodically enacted at the fish pond behind Page. Here Lambda Chi President Clif Cooke is tossed in by playful brothers, despite cold weather.

There will always be memories. For the boys, they may be of the countless bull sessions . . . the night your roommate came in and couldn't make anybody believe he was pinned . . . the time some of you moved the bed, the clothes, all the belongings of your fraternity brother out into the quadrangle . . . the poker games . . . the hours spent watching television or listening to records.

The girls have memories like the one of the two candles forming a frame of light around the girl in the window while a fraternity serenades from below . . . the coat on the chair warning intruders to knock first on the side-parlor door . . . the aroma of hot coffee and rolls in the kitchen on Sunday mornings . . . the president's gavel tapping the parlor door for order as you squirmed through house meeting.

LEISURE TIME in the East Campus dormitories is spent in a variety of ways. Bridge games on the floor (top), and just plain goofing off and lolling around (bottom), are time-honored favorites with these Pegram girls.

Upperclass F.A.C.'s start freshmen off on right foot

To help the new freshman to start off properly at Duke is the duty of each member of the Freshman Advisory Council. Since the F.A.C. man has done everything that the freshman will do, he is able to assist with problems, work, and decisions. The things that bother freshmen are "old stuff" to him, so because of his experience, the F.A.C. man helps the newcomers during his first term at college. By the end of the semester, he is a friend and advisor.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVES

BOS and Phi Eta Sigma laud frosh leaders and scholars

Leaders on West Campus, recognized as being active participants in Freshmen activities, successfully shouldering responsibilities as sophomores—these are the BOS men. They were picked because they showed their leadership ability and dependibility in the various activities they entered during their Freshmen year.

They are the boys who carry out the various duties that make the University run smoothly, who stage the different social functions that add jest to Duke life, and who maintain Duke spirit and enthusiasm at a high pitch. Starting the whirl of Duke dances, BOS joined forces with their sister organization, Sandals, and sponsored a semi-formal in September. Another accomplishment was the decorated goalposts at each home game. BOS supervised the towering Freshman bonfire before the Carolina game and escorted the judges for the Homecoming displays.

Some people hoard money, others hoard old guns, but these boys hoard A's, while making their classmates turn green with envy. With the definite scholarship goal of a national honorary to strive for, these first year Whiz Kids have rolled up their sleeves and buckled down to work, taking quizzes and term papers in their stride. To other Freshmen struggling to make their average, those who have attained Phi Eta Sigma are a beacon of encouragement.

Fraternity Quad

It's just one of the many quadrangles that make up West Campus. Seemingly it is no different from the rest of the campus, if anything less desiring of our attention because it seems to be shunted away from the main quadrangle. It looks much like the freshman quadrangle except for neon signs that shine forth at night. Eight fraternities live in the quadrangle. For them the quadrangle is the center of the campus; for them its chapter rooms make up the real life of college; for them this plot of ground about one hundred feet square with chains protecting the grass outranks even Duke Gardens. Inconspicuous though it is, for some not even the Chapel, the stadium, or the Union will hold more significance than fraternity quadrangle because of the memories which it will evoke as a symbol of fraternity life.

I. F. C. GIVES NEEDED UNITY TO DUKE GREEKS

The Inter-Fraternity Council is the power among the fraternities at Duke University. Each of the nineteen fraternities on campus has representation on the council. These representatives meet as a body to govern the actions of the fraternities.

Besides outlawing off campus contact with freshmen, the Inter-Fraternity Council sets regulations for rushing and limits freshman-fraternity relationship. Open Houses are held in each section and in this way freshmen meet the fraternity men to see what will be offered them. The council strongly enforces its regulations, but it also sponsors "Greek Week" in order to help the freshmen to get to know each other better. When it becomes necessary, the Inter-Fraternity Council punishes fraternities which have violated the laws set down. The organization, however, always works to improve the fraternity system at Duke.

INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL President Jim Pollock presides over meetings, judges violators of rushing rules.

DELTA TAU DELTA

DELT PRESIDENT Dick Kime, senior from Searsdale, N. Y., majoring in business administration, has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Kappa Psi.

RUSHING OPEN HOUSES with usual questions of "Where are you from?" and "What are ya majorin' in?" are a must on the list of social events for all brothers.

DINNER-DANCE is held by Delta Tau Delta in ballroom above Harvey's cafeteria. Crowning of Delt Queen, Faye Evans, by President, Bob Silkett during the dance intermission was a main attraction of this annual spring affair which climaxes year's activities for the Delts.

KAPPA ALPHA

FRESHMEN FADE into background as KA's shower their personalities on the girls during rushing open house. Coed's smile is calculated to draw new members into fold.

KA PRESIDENT Clay Ring, Business Administration major from Kernersville, N. C., has been on Dean's List, was a representative to Student Government.

MUSIC FILLS the air at the SAE-KA formal as brothers from the latter fraternity engage in an impromptu song recital. Affairs of this nature indicate an improved spirit of inter-fraternity co-operation. The Washington Duke Ballroom was scene of this December dance.

Kappa Alpha members are, sitting on rear wall left to right, Tank Lawrence, Whit Smith, Pete Hull, Joe Hardison, Bill McGuinn, Bob Sudduth, Bill Grigg, Pete McGamy, Gene Partain, Henry Dickman, Ben Crumpler, Alan Bane, Al Coggeshall, Bob Bennett, Bob Michael, Bob Garret, Bob Burrows, Doug Montgomery, Fred Farmer, John Dunson, Will Hanes, Bob Midgette. KAPPA SIGMA

PULCHRITUDE AND POTENTIAL pledges abound at an open house. Brothers and freshmen find common denominator in co-eds who testify to lodge's social status.

KAPPA SIG PRESIDENT Tom Henderson, geology major whose home is in Charlotte, North Carolina, is a member of Delta Phi Alpha, German honorary.

FRATERNITY SONGS are important part of rushing program, and during rush season fraternity men put much effort into polishing up appropriate numbers, singing of which is always carried off with great gusto. Here Kappa Sigs pause briefly to puff giant cigars.

Kappa Sigs are, kneeling left to right, Frank Lang (Secretary), Bob Simpson (Vice-President), Ralph McClannan (Treasurer), Newt Tsangaris (M. C.), Tom Henderson (President). Standing in middleground are Clarence Bailey, Bob Trebus, Jock Hodgin, Wayne Cunningham, Jim Hilton, Jim Bradt, Pete Goubert. TUXEDO-CLAD SANTA makes Yultide presentation to brother Lee Noel at annual Phi Delt Christmas dance in Washington Duke Ballroom. Others await their turns.

HUNGRY PHI DELT pauses in his rushing lecture while he accepts refreshment from white-coated brother. Many freshmen omit their regular evening meal before rush functions and take nourishment from numerous fraternities they are required to visit during rushing.

PHI KAPPA PSI

BROTHER DISPLAYS piano talent as he entertains coeds and freshmen at Sunday rush function. Singing of Phi Psi songs also added to the informality of the occasion.

PHI PSI PRESIDENT Chris Folk, education major, is treasurer of KDP, member of Phi Beta Kappa and Chronicle Staff. His home town is Charlotte, N. C.

SQUARE DANCE was an important fall function for the Phi Psis and dates. Those attending, of course, dressed in typical costumes of blue jeans and plaid wool shirts, and some brought straw hats and plunked on ukeleles or banjos to give the occasion more atmosphere.

A flagstone walk leads to one of the busiest spots on East—the Pan Hel House. Not only is this brick building the home of ten sororities, but it is the center of everyone's life on campus, housing the Dope Shop, the Post Office, the Devil's Den, and Store. At all hours of the day, girls run in and out, looking in at the P.O., stopping for a coke. Late in the afternoon, the front door deeply inset under the pagoda-like roof and framed by lattice work is being constantly opened and shut as girls hurry to sorority meetings, quickly glancing at the notices posted on it.

The other two sororities have their rooms in Mordecai House, whose sloping roof can be seen among the pines off to the north of the Pan Hel House close to the Infirmary.

PAN-HELLENIC COUNCIL GUIDES THE SORORITIES

A sorority system in which there was a girl for every sorority and a sorority for every girl would be the ideal of every Pan-Hellenic group. To strive for this type of relationship is the never-ending task of the Pan-Hel Council at Duke.

This year when there has been so much questioning of the values of sororities, there has been a good deal of house cleaning in each sorority chapter. Through the guidance of Pan-Hel Council (to which body each sorority sends two representatives) each sorority has been able to see its relative merits in its relations with its members, with other sororities, with non-Greeks, and with the Administration. Whether any answer to the problem of abolishing or retaining sororities is forthcoming in the near future, remains to be seen. Meanwhile the subject is being explored and discussed in committees.

For the greater part of every year, Duke's huge football stadium collects dust. It lies exposed to the elements, a great empty hole in the earth. With the exception of a few ground keepers, no one goes near it for months at a time. People don't come to look at it or take pictures of it. It has no aesthetic beauty, like the Chapel, nor any continual and constant use, like the Union. It has only a single purpose in existing, and that only in season.

But in the fall the stadium has its day. Then people come from far and wide to fill its rows and rows of wooden benches and make its walls reverberate with the sounds of their voices. For a short while it is the center of attention on campus, Duke's most indispensable structure. For a short time it fulfills its single purpose, and then it is left to itself once more.

Duke's two gyms are both like and unlike the giant stadium that is just down the hill from them. For a part of the year at least they have all the glamor and excitement that the stadium possesses during the football season. Perhaps the quantity of mass hysteria is not as great, but the quality is just the same. Wrestling, swimming, and gymnastic meets in the Old Gym and basketball in the Indoor Stadium have their share of spectator enthusiasm as football does. Here is their similarity.

But there is a difference between the gyms and the stadium. For nine months the stadium is empty save for infrequent track meets; for seven days a week every week in the school year the gyms are alive with students engaged in every kind of indoor athletics. The gyms become a part of every student's life before he leaves. For two years he is required to go to the gym to take physical education, but after that a majority of them come of their own free will.

Only the Duke Chapel outshines the Indoor Stadium in its impressiveness. Tier after tier of seats are jammed with shouting spectators at the Blue Devil basketball games. Its massive size, the conflux of 9,000 people, the din of sound reverberating as Duke scores make the Indoor Stadium rival the football stadium in glamor and panorama.

Less spectacular than the New Gym, but more diversified in its athletic equipment is the Old Gym. Two basketball courts, gymnastic equipment, wrestling pit, swimming pool, varsity dressing rooms, intramural headquarters, and P.E. equipment are housed in this building. Beside the gyms are the tennis and handball courts that round out Duke's fine athletic plant.

NEW GYMNASIUM houses immense indoor stadium in constant use for sport events, dances, and on various other occasions. It also contains apparatus rooms and armory.

OLD GYMNASIUM is scene of great activity during winter months. Here physical ed classes and intramural basketball games are held along with gym team practice.

THE WEIGH OF ALL FLESH

Frosh take compulsory P.E.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION and Athletics Director Eddie Cameron is assistant coach, was once head of football.

From the first day Freshmen enter Duke, they hear stories about the physical strength test which they are required to take. Upperclassmen seem to derive pleasure in building tall tales about the coming ordeal.

"Hey, Joe, that P.E. test is really going to be rugged."

"Yep, Joe, it's no picnic."

"What do they make us do, you guys?"

"Oh, just a couple hundred dips on the parallel bars, the broad jump, rapid sit-ups, and running—all in two minutes."

FRESHMEN LEARN manly art of self defense with help of masks.

IN APPARATUS CLASS, frosh work on bars, are graded on ability.

WRESTLING IS PART OF COURSE REQUIRED OF FROS H. THEY LEARN FUNDAMENTALS, PUT THIEM TO USE.

"Yep, Joe, you have to do that so they can classify you into A, B, or C gym classes."

"That doesn't sound so bad."

"That's what you think. Just wait and see."

Pale but confident, the Freshmen went to the gym. They left still pale, but no longer confident. Sore and tired muscles in their stomachs, arms, and legs caused them to walk slowly back to Kilgo Quadrangle and the welcomed sack.

CHOOSE-UP BASKETBALL GAMES are played by sophomore physical education classes. Required to take gym, sophomores are allowed choice of sports.

WORKING ON TRAMPOLINE IS FUN, BUT DANGEROUS. AS ONE MAN PERFORMS, REST OF CLASS STANDS BY.

"D" IS FOR THE . . .

Duke's athletes are Varsity "D" Club members

Twice every year the Duke Campus is dotted with men going to classes in attire that would be more fitting for the athletic field.

All of this is a part of the initiation of new members into the Varsity D Club, an organization of Duke lettermen.

This year their most important project was an overwhelming success; for the Red Cross Blood Drive, which they sponsored, brought a record total of 602 pints of blood for Korea. Last spring they sponsored the first Blue-White game between Billy Cox's All Stars and Coach Murray's first Duke team. Reception of visiting teams by Varsity D members and visits to Edgemont Community Center were also a part of their program.

The Varsity D Club extends the honor of membership to lettermen in all sports, and all sports are represented. It cuts through fraternity lines and class seniority, bringing together men with common interests—a love of sports. The finest witness to its power for achievement was their selling of more tickets to the Gerry Gerard Memorial Game than any other organization on campus.

Football is a long, tough grind

DURING PRACTICE drill, a lineman charges into blocking dummy while Coach Murray looks for weakness.

Separating the men from the boys—that's quite a job considering both the quantity and quality of muscle and brawn that turns out for football practice each year. But that's the problem facing head coach Bill Murray and his staff.

Under the watchful eyes of Coach Murray and his assistants the men have to be broken down as individuals and blended into a team. It is the job of coaches Dumpy Hagler, Hershall Caldwell, and Carmen Falcone to develope the defensive team, while the offensive backfield is capably directed by Duke's former All-American great "Ace" Parker. Tom O'Boyle and Marty Pierson weld the offensive line into a cohesive unit. Bob Cox and Al Johns develop next year's stars for the Big Blue.

The endless work of these men enables the machine to function smoothly. It is their job to review their opponents for the coming year, picking out weaknesses and developing new plays, any one of which might prove to be a game winning factor. All these things plus countless others go into putting a team on the field on Saturday.

These were the forces behind our 1951 Blue Devils. They are only half of the story. The players themselves make up the other half.

COACH BILL MURRAY surveys entire squad as they loosen up with calisthenics. The 1951 season was Murray's first as Duke football coach.

OUT OF THE TUNNEL amidst the roar of the crowd comes the Big Blue to take the field. The tunnel runs under stadium to locker room in gym.

SPRING PRACTICE with its calisthenics and wind sprints are not the most looked forward to part of a Duke gridster's career, but the winter kinks must be ironed out, and early spring is the time.

The men composing the squad have to return to school in the fall weeks ahead of the regular students to begin practice. This tough grind is made even more difficult by the start of classes.

Considering the afternoons spent in practice, the evening blackboard drills and the normal load of school work, it is no wonder that only the men come through.

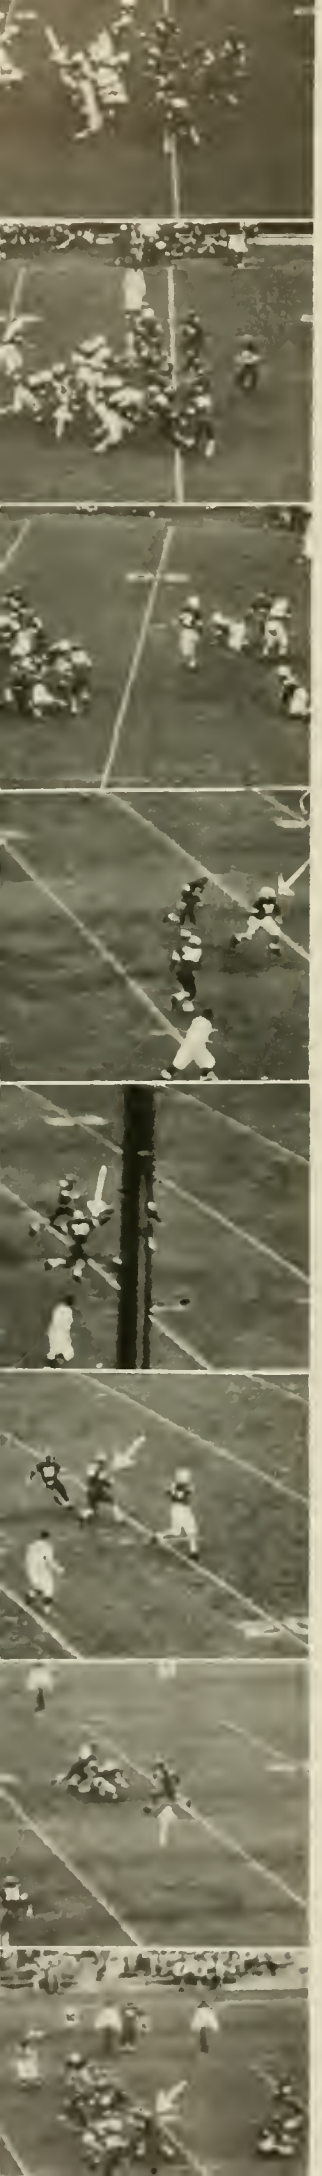
DUKE'S T SPLIT GAMECOCKS

South Carolina bows to Big Blue in Columbia

With a brilliant exhibition of "split-T" magic, Duke's Blue Devils roared to a 34-6 win over South Carolina in the season's opener. Led by freshman Jerry Barger, the Dukes performed magnificently under the guidance of their new coach. The Duke defense was superb as it held Gamecock star Wadiak to only 26 yards. Offensive play was dominated by Charlie Smith and Piney Fields, each scoring twice.



THE MOVIE STRIP: S. C. quarterback takes snap from center(1), fakes handoff and fades back(2) to pass(3). Receiver, back of Duke safety man, is waiting for ball in clear(4) when Bickel makes spectacular one-handed interception(5). He turns(6) and starts down field(7), running into host of South Carolina tacklers after ten-yard gain.

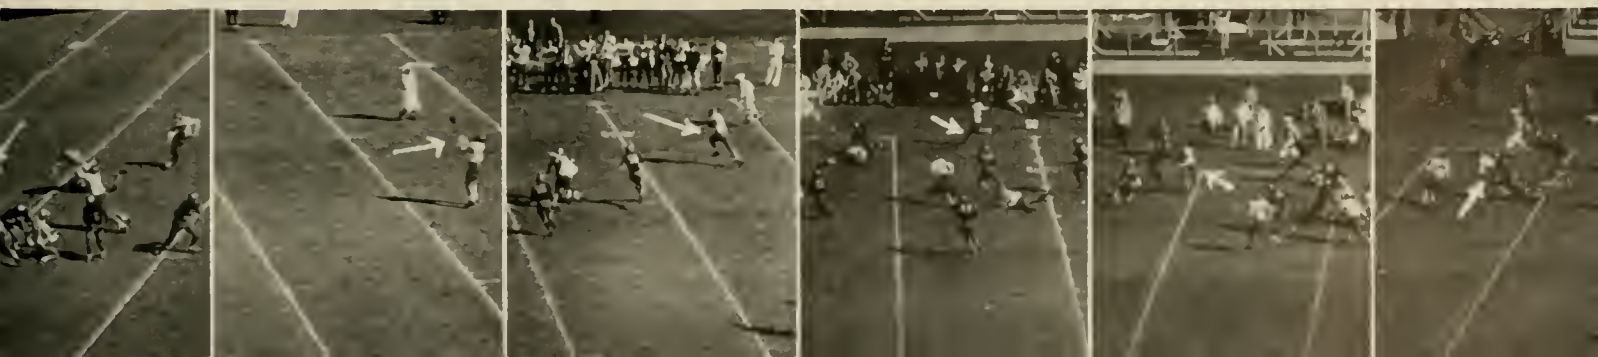
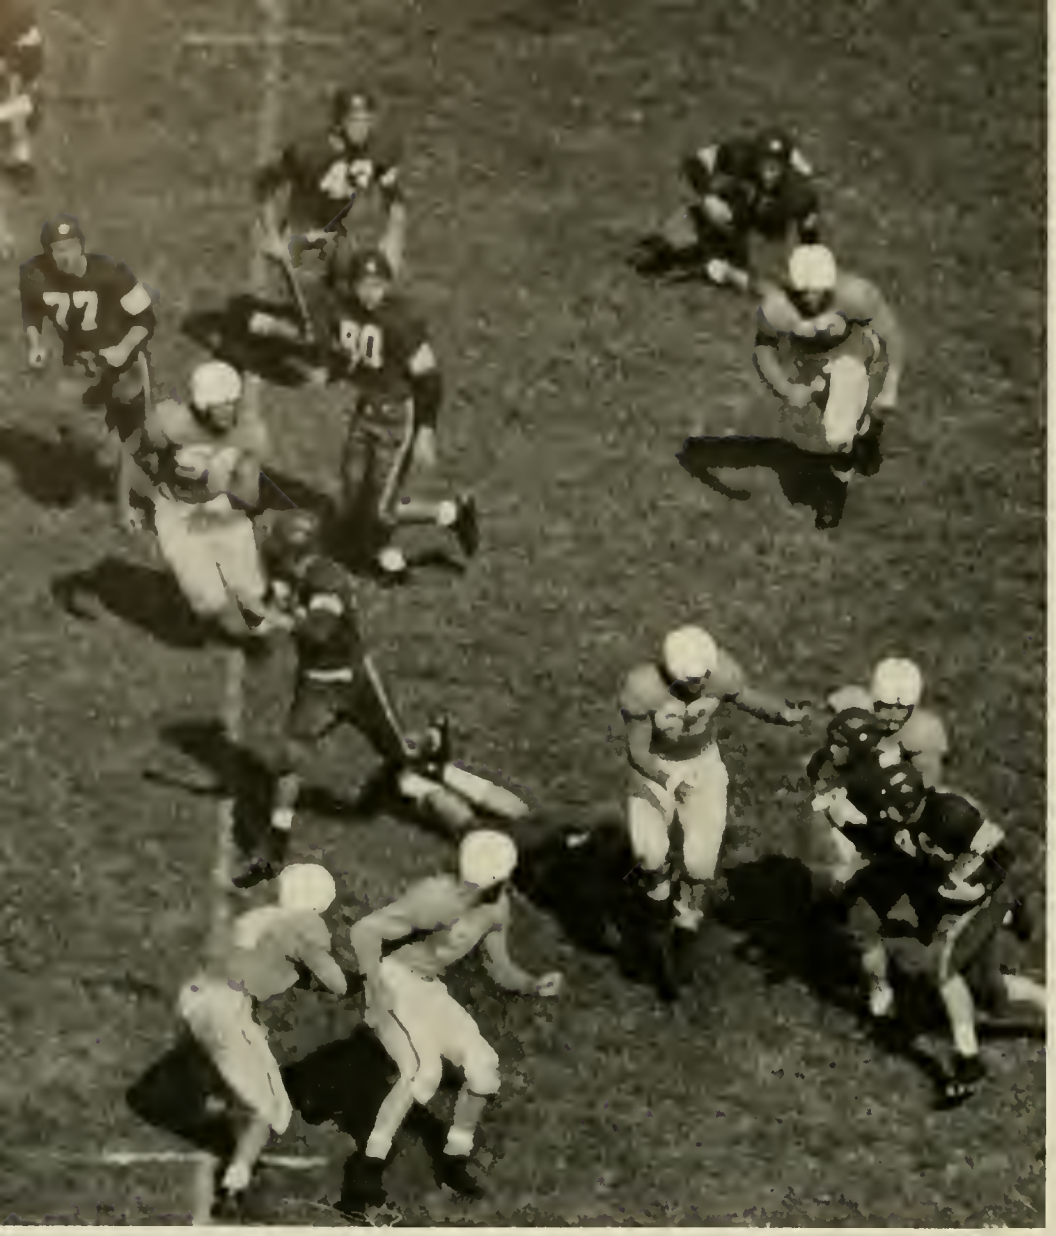
PANTHERS SCENT OFF

With the help of a 41 yard punt return by safetyman Grune the Blue Devils hung up their second victory of the young season. The Devils held a 7-0 first quarter advantage, but by halftime the Panthers had gone ahead 14-13. With five minutes left in the game Grune hauled in a Pitt punt and raced to the 26. Four plays later Charlie Smith drove in to the end zone for the clincher. The Duke defense stopped a Pitt drive to insure the Devils 19-14 win.

THE MOVIE STRIP: Late in game, with Duke trailing 14-13, Pitt punts(1). George Grune takes kick on own 32-yard line(2), heads for sideline(3), threads his way downfield aided by beautiful blocking(4), cuts back at 35(5), tackled (6) after 45-yard run that sets up winning T.D.





VOLS SHOW STRENGTH AS THREE MEN CLOSE IN ON "RED" SMITH.

Duke's dreams of national football glory were shattered by a powerful Tennessee team that followed a familiar pattern—waiting for the opponent's mistakes and then exploding for touchdowns. The Vols did it four times, once in each quarter, to win by a 26-0 score. After two consecutive wins the inexperience of the Blue Devils with the "split-T" finally caught up with them. Seven fumbles and twelve penalties were enough to halt any offensive threats that Duke could make.

Besides the Tennessee scoring, the game was a nightmare of offensive sputtering for both teams. All in all there were twenty penalties and eleven fumbles that could not be entirely attributed to the rugged defensive play. Tennessee only made one more first down than Duke, but the story of the game was Duke's mistakes and Tennessee's capitalizing on them. The Blue Devils suffered a serious blow when Gene Brooks, senior end, broke his arm and was sidelined for the rest of the season.

TENNESSEE WALTZES ON

THE MOVIE STRIP: Tenn. lines up in single wing(1). Fullback takes snap, fakes to left half(2). Play appears headed for left side, but left end pulls out of line(3), takes handoff on end around(4). But Bickel sees through play(5) and brings runner down(6), throwing Tenn. for loss.

WHO'S AFRAID OF THE BIG BAD WOLF

THE MOVIE STRIP: Ball is snapped to quarterback Barger(1), who hands off to Red Smith(2). He runs into a swarm of State tacklers and seems about to be smeared (3) when he reverses field and breaks into clear(4), races around last tackler(5), and scores standing up(6).

Duke escapes near upset at hands of State

For fifty-seven minutes it looked as if State's Wolfpack would pull one of the biggest upsets of the year. They had come from behind a 13-0 deficit to lead the Duke Blue Devils 21-20 in the waning moments of the fourth period, but Duke's superior running game and a couple of Smiths were not to be denied. With three minutes left Charlie Smith plunged over for the winning touchdown, his second of the day. "Red" Smith and Jack Kistler accounted for the other scores in the 27-21 victory.

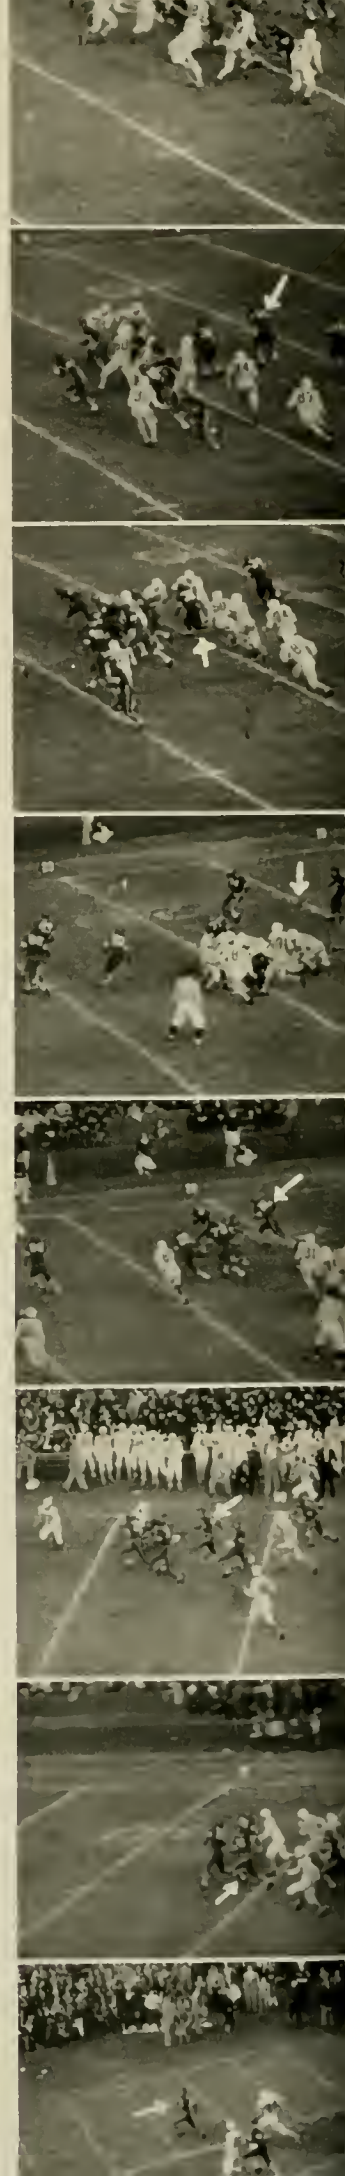
DUKE GOBBLES UP EASY WIN

Blue avalanche hits VPI

Scoring four times in the first period, the Blue Devils blasted Virginia Tech's impotent Gobblers 55-6. Charlie Smith and Piney Fields provided the offensive thrills for the Devils by scoring five TD's between them. Smith scored twice, one on an 84 yard gallop, and Field tallied three. The remaining three scores were registered by Barger, Kistler, and Caudle as the Devils' "split-T" gained at will against the inexperienced Gobbler line.

The Duke defense stopped the Techmen cold. The Gobblers were able to gain only 52 yards, had eight passes intercepted, and lost the ball five times on fumbles. The game provided the Devils with little more than a brisk workout.



THE MOVIE STRIP: Ball is snapped to Barger who fakes handoff(1), fakes pitchout to Kistler(2), and runs into tacklers(3). Going down, he laterals to Smith(4) who heads downfield(5), cuts to midfield(6), breaks into clear(7), scores(8) after spectacular 85-yard sprint.

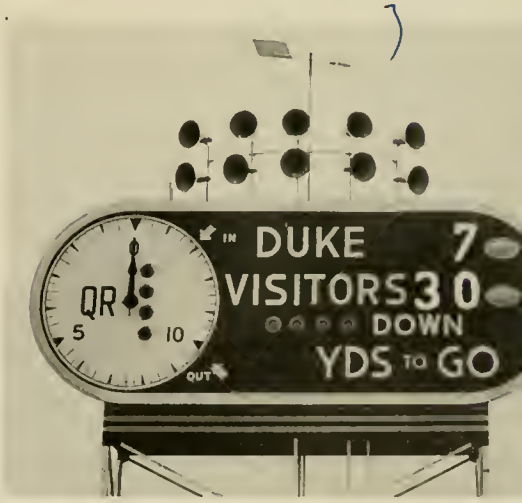
DEVIL TURNED BLUE

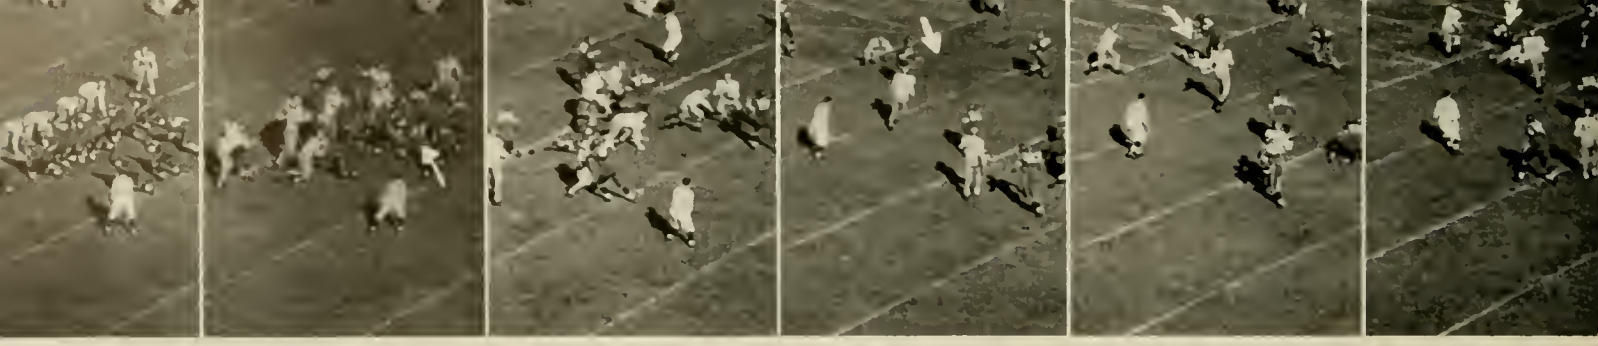
Virginia Cavaliers throw cold water on spirited Homecoming festivities

In a nightmarish fourth quarter Duke's hope for Homecoming success was shattered by an inspired Virginia eleven. The Devils were in complete command for the first two quarters and enjoyed a 7-0 halftime advantage. Niven had plunged over from the one to put the Big Blue out front.

The Cavaliers crossed the 50 only twice during the first half, but the second half was a different story. The Virginians nailed Charlie Smith behind the Duke goal for their first two points. In the next eight minutes they scored four TD's and ran their total to thirty. The Duke's stopped a fifth Virginia drive, but the Cavaliers won it handily by a 30-7 score.



THE MOVIE STRIP: Barger takes snap as Fields and Kistler head around left end(1). Barger pitches out to Fields(2) who cuts down field in back of Kistler(3). He breaks into clear(4), but is unable to shake off the last Virginia tackler(5), and is brought down after thirty yard gain.



THE MOVIE STRIP: With one minute left to play in the first half, Duke lines up on the Tech ten(1). Barger pitches out to Worth Lutz, No. 17(2), who fakes a run and then cocks his arm to pass(3), Earon, No. 80, having broken into the clear. Earon waits with outstretched arms for the pass on the three(4), gathers in the ball just as he is hit by Tech tackler(5), and lunges over the goal line(6) for the touchdown that puts Duke into the lead.

TECHNICAL VICTORY

Blue Devils battle Georgia Tech to two-touchdown draw

The Blue Devils made up for their loss to Virginia by breaking powerful Georgia Tech's six game win streak. The Duke defense turned in their finest game of the season as they allowed the Techman to cross the 50 only once during the first half.

Freshman Worth Lutz provided the offensive fireworks for the Devils. After safetyman Grune ran back an intercepted pass to the Tech eleven, Lutz faded back and tossed a TD pass to Earon. The Yellow Jackets tied it at 7-7 in the third quarter and went ahead 14-7 on a run-back of a blocked punt.

Another intereception, this time by Hager, set up Duke's tieing TD. Lutz lugged it over from the two and Green added the extra point to furnish the only blot on Tech's record.

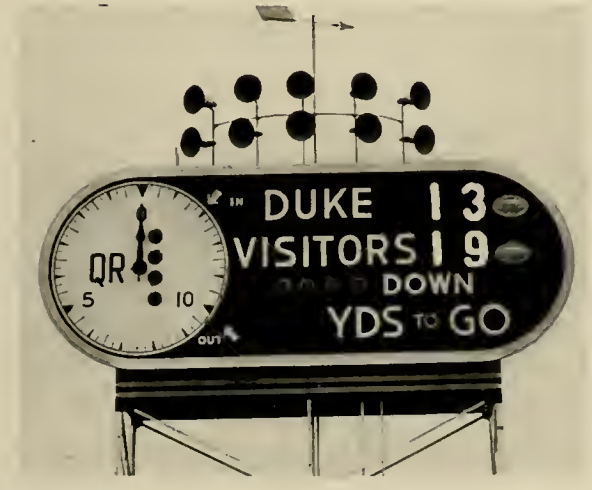
DEVILS' WAKE

Demon Deacons stave off rally to preserve margin



The Deacons of Wake Forest punched across three second period scores and then hung on desperately to fight off a second half rally by the Blue Devils to win 19-13. Neither team showed any offensive spark until the Deacons recovered two Devil fumbles and turned both into scores. Another tally gave the Baptists a 19-0 lead at halftime.

The Devils came surging back after intermission. Lutz passed to "Red" Smith for the first Duke score and Barger dove over for the second. Kistler and Smith led the Duke attack as they ran up half of Duke's total yardage.

THE MOVIE STRIP: Barger gets ball(1), hands off to Kistler going thru center(2), and then fakes handoff to Smith(3). Kistler breaks thru hole in center(4), and into secondary(5), races past tacklers(6), almost gets away (7), and is pulled down on three(8) after 25 yard gain.

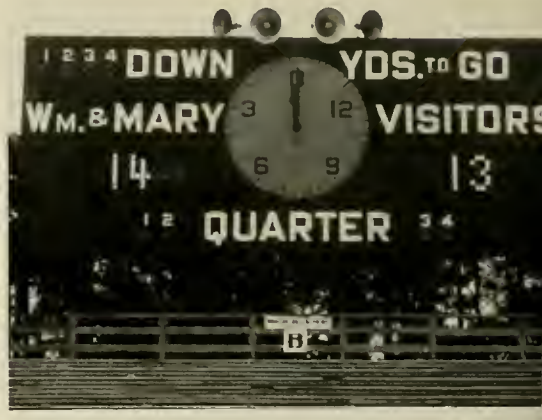
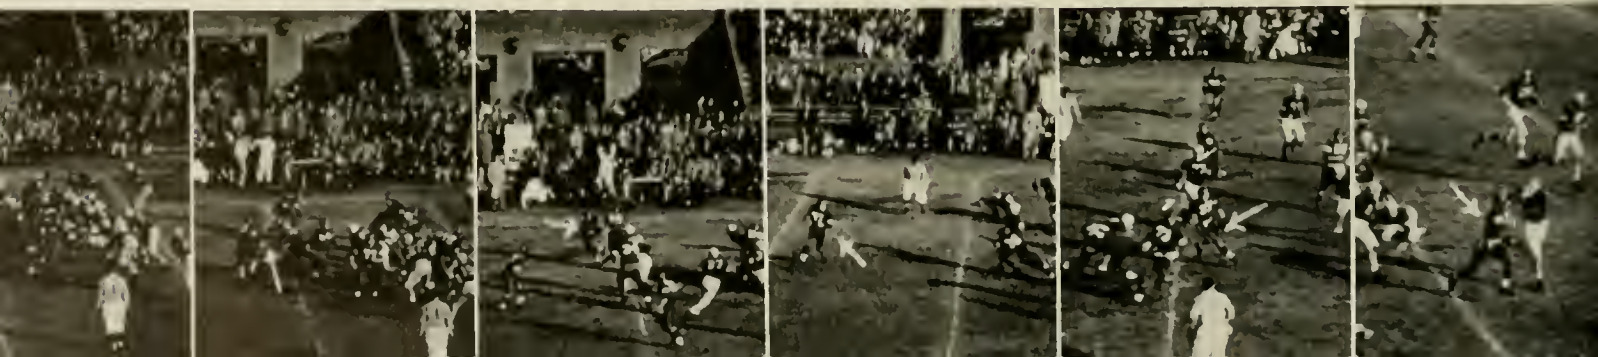
William & Mary gets one-point win

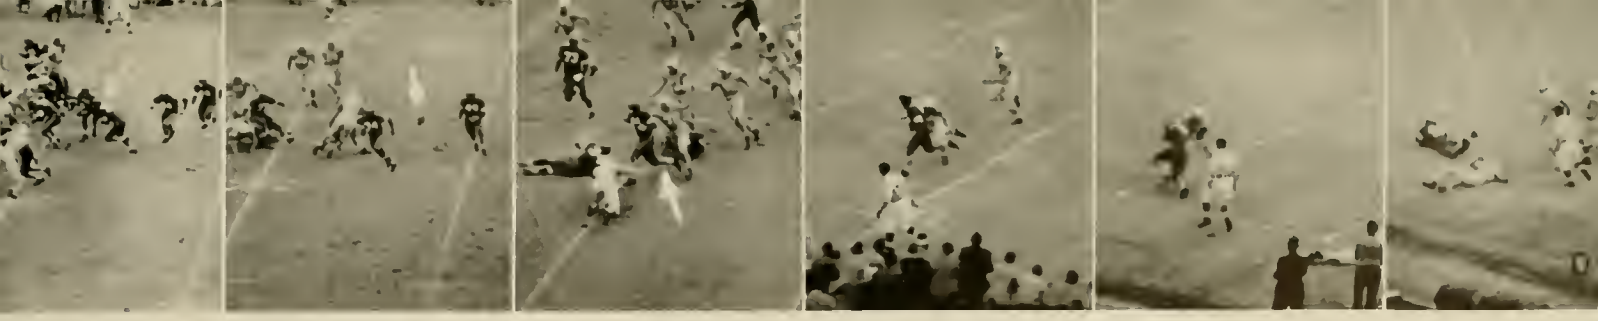
For the second straight week the Devils lacked a first half scoring punch. Two Indian interceptions stopped both Duke scoring threats inside the W. & M. ten, and forced the Devils to retire at half-time fourteen points behind.

With Lloyd Caudle leading the Duke attack the Blue Devils ground out two markers, one in the third stanza and one in the fourth. Caudle tallied both Duke scores but Ray Green's second placement was wide. Duke drove forty yards to the Indian seven before a costly fumble killed Blue Devil chances. Duke led in statistics but the Indians pocketed the win.



THE MOVIE STRIP: Freshman quarterback Barger takes ball from center(1) and hands off to Red Smith, headed around left end(2). Smith hands off to Caudle on wing(3) who circles on deep reverse(4), cuts in behind good blocking(5), tries to evade tackler(6) who pushes him out of bounds after ten-yard gain.





THE MOVIE STRIP: Barger fakes to Candle(1), pitches out to Red Smith (2), who eludes tacklers on thirty-five(3) and twenty(4), is thrown off balance on ten(5), and comes down on two after brilliant forty yard run.

NUTHIN' FINER

Joyous student body goes wild as Big Blue bids Carolina Good Night

The Tarheels of U.N.C. were handed their eighth setback of the year when they met the Blue Devils in the season's finale. Duke jumped to an easy 6-0 lead but saw it vanish as the Tarheels went ahead 7-6 in the third quarter. Their lead was short-lived as the Devils came roaring back and in thirteen plays were ahead again by a 13-7 count.

The Duke defense stopped Carolina's last drive on the Devils' 18. From there the Dukes marched 82 yards for their final score of the season and a 19-7 win.

RIM ENOUGH FOR FIVE

All-American Groat leads Blue Devils to prominence

Starting their second year under the direction of Coach Hal Bradley the Blue Devils roared to an 85-48 win over the Temply Owls in the season's opener. Temple's Mikvy was held to 17 points while Groat poured in 33 in the game billed as the "Battle of the All-Americans." The Temple game showed the balance of the Devils as two other Dukesters hit double figures.

After the Temple victory the Blue Devils invaded Hanes Hosiery and brought back a 78-68 win. Groat was high again with 26 and Janicki and D'Emilio followed with 13 and 11 respectively.

Back in the Indoor Stadium the Devils met and defeated Bradley and Carolina. The Braves were humbled 87-69 while the Tarheels were toppled 77-59 in the Jerry Gerard Memorial Game. Groat poured in 25 points against the Braves. The scoring balance of the Devils showed itself again in the Carolina game as Groat, Janicki, D'Emilio, and Glasow all hit the two figure column.

The Devils first defeat came in their first official conference game. Furman upset the Blue Devils 73-72 on a free throw in the last seconds of play. Crowder led the Devils with 16 markers.

The Devils took revenge on the Keydets of V.M.I. for their loss to Furman. The Dukesters burned the nets for 102 points—the highest point total any Devil team ever scored in one game. The Keydets were way behind with only 45.

Davidson was next on the list and the Devils won it 88-49. It was the second league win for the Blue Devils as Groat scored 24 and Janicki hit for 17.

The Blue Devils broke even on their first trip north. George Washington was handed a 98-76 loss as Groat led with 32. This ran his season average to 25.4 points per game.

West Virginia's Mountaineers, however, turned back the Big Blue 95-74. Groat was the only consistent scorer for the Devils; he hit for 24. D'Emilio was next for Duke but scored only 9 points.

On the 27th of December the Blue Devils met Columbia in the first round of the Dixie Classic. The Columbians handed the Devils their third loss of the year 66-58. Wake Forest fell to the Big Blue 79-74 in the second round. Groat set a new record for points in one game for the Classic—he scored 35 against the Deacons. Duke lost to Southern California in the consolation tilt 87-69.

High scoring Pennsylvania was limited to 52 points as Duke won 62-52. Groat and D'Emilio scored all of Duke's points in the fourth period. Groat had a total of 22 while D'Emilio hit for 19.

Duke met State after the Penn encounter. The game was a typical Duke-State thriller and with the usual outcome. The Wolfpack won in a double overtime 72-70. Janicki pushed the game into overtime when his desperation shot from center court tied it at 64-64.

As the yearbook goes to press the Devils have run up an 11 game win streak since the loss to State. N.Y.U. was the next Blue Devil victim. The Violets were handed a 74-72 setback in the Garden. The Second Temple game proved no closer than the first as the Devils won it 86-65 in Philadelphia.

With exams over the Blue Devils turned their attention to conference foes. Wake Forest was again turned back, this time 90-69. The Tarheels were defeated for the second time this season by a 73-66 score.

The Duke's then handed George Washington an 89-66 loss. All American Dick Groat broke his own Duke Stadium scoring record by pouring in 46 points as he hit from every angle.

William and Mary's Indians were beaten in a close one 68-62. The Indians held a 14 point lead going into the fourth stanza but the Duke's rallied. Groat hit for 12 in the final period, half of his total for the entire game, and Duke won it going away.

Duke turned back Navy in a thriller before the second State game. The Blue Devils turned back the Middies 70-68 in an overtime encounter. Duke handed State their first conference defeat at home in 46 straight tilts. The Wolfpack fell 71-58 before the fast breaking Blue Devils.

The Duke win streak was extended to 11 wins with victories over Maryland, Wake Forest, and South Carolina. The Terrapins lost 56-51 in the lowest scoring game of the season. Fifty-six fouls were called in the Wake Forest tilt, 26 against the Blue Devils, as the Dukes took it 87-62. Groat hit for 40 points in the South Carolina game. It was Duke's 11th straight win and the 96-82 victory clinched a birth in the Southern Conference playoffs in Raleigh.

This year's team has performed superbly under the able direction of Coach Bradley. Besides the consistent accuracy of Groat, Janicki, and D'Emilio, the rebounding of Fleming and Crowder and the fine play of Deimling, Glasow, Latimer, and Johnson have all contributed to the team's excellent record. Lacey, Deckert, and Shabel also played well.

Duke baseballers set season record

Opening the season with two impressive wins over Indiana, Duke's baseballers displayed the power that was to bring them the Big Four and Southern Conference championships. The Blue Devils slugged their way to a season record of 15 wins against 8 losses including 11 Southern Conference victories against 6 defeats. Shortstop Groat placed on the College Coaches Association first team All-American while Bill Werber was placed on the third team. They were the only players in the Southern Conference to receive mention and both received berths on the Conference's mythical nine.

BASEBALL CONTINUED

Leading Duke's power at the plate was double All-American Dick Groat. Groat ended the season with a batting average of .386 closely followed by Werber, Bergeron, Gibbons, Johnson, and Powers, who all batted above .300. Powers took the honors in the Southern Conference batting race, leading the league with a hefty .417. The overall team average was a healthy .299, one of the finest in the conference.

Lewis and Davis finished the season in the one two positions of the conference pitching race with records of 4-2 and 2-1 respectively. Lewis, called the "Big Four's Top Right-hander," blasted Wake Forest three times while compiling a season record of 7 wins and 3 losses. Davis, who ended the season with 5-2 record, shut out Clemson 5-0 to bring the Devils the Southern Conference title. The 1951 season was a fitting climax to Coach Coomb's 23rd year as mentor and brought him the Conference's "Coach of the Year" award.

Trackmen have good season

The Duke track team, coached by former track star "Red" Lewis and captained by Buddy Grisso, ran up a season record of four wins, two losses, and one tie. The Blue Devils lost only to strong teams from Navy and North Carolina and came up with an unusual tie of $65\frac{1}{2}$-$65\frac{1}{2}$ with Princeton. The Duke cindermen won over Miami 73-53, blasted Florida State 103-28, downed N. C. State 95-31, and toppled Virginia 91-40. With Fields and Reeves taking first places in the 220 dash and low hurdles and Conner placing first in the pole vault, the Blue Devil harriers tied Maryland for the conference title.

The Devils completed one of their most successful southern trips in years. Besides defeating Miami and Florida State the Devils captured four of the five featured relays in the Florida Relays during their southern swing. Sporting wins over many of the strongest teams in the nation Coach Jack Person's 1951 Lacrosse team ended the season with a 6-2 record, one of their best in many years. The Blue Devils fought their way to the runner-up slot of the Dixie championship and were ranked with Virginia as the number two team for the national championship. The Duke stickmen boasted two of the best defensemen in the country in all-Americans Charlie Gilfallin and Bob Bickel. The stellar performance of Rod Boyce and Fred Eisenbrandt, 2nd team All-Americans, enabled the Blue Devils to down such highly-ranked teams as Johns Hopkins and Navy.

The Devils then traveled to Lexington, Va., there swamping the hapless Generals of Washington and Lee. The Blue Devils edged out a strong Washington College team 6-5 and blasted a powerful Navy squad 17-6 for the 4th and 5th wins of the year. Duke made it seven straight in turning back a favored Johns Hopkins, 9-7. Goalie Don Bafford was credited with 18 saves as the Blue Devils bested Hopkins for the first time in the history of the school. The Blue Devils tasted their first defeat at the hands of Virginia by a close 10-11 score and dropped the last game to semi-pro Mt. Washington.

TENNIS

THE POINT SETTERS

Netmen enjoy best season since 1934

The Duke University tennis team of 1951 successfully dealt with one of their most difficult schedules and finished their best season since 1934 with an impressive 13-2 record.

In compiling their thirteen wins the Duke netmen downed such national tennis powers as Michigan State, Florida University, Dartmouth, Michigan, William and Mary, and Virginia.

Along with Captain Ross the Blue Devils were backed by the steady play of sophomores Keston Deimling and Norm Schellenger; seniors Hal Lipton and Jack Warmath and John Tapley, the latter going undefeated in fourteen straight matches.

Golfers have near perfect season

Building their team around a nucleus of returning veterans, the 1951 linksmen drove, chipped, and putted their way to the Southern Conference Golf Championship for the 13th time in the last sixteen years. Led by co-captains Lou McLennan and Mike Souchak, the Devils racked up an impressive string of 14 straight wins before dropping a thriller to North Carolina 14-13. Coach Hagler's linksters swept aside all comers and rode into the Southern Conference championship 33 strokes ahead of the nearest team.

Tankmen boast triumphant season

The Blue Devil swimming team opened their season with a smashing victory over William and Mary and continued in their winning ways in seven of their next eight encounters. North Carolina, which is undefeated in three years of dual competition, provided the only defeat, but Duke still had a meet with N. C. State when the yearbook went to press. Coach Jack Persons' charges scored impressive victories over Georgia Tech, V.M.I., and V.P.I., with team captain Whitey Mellin setting a new record for the Duke poo

Coach Carmen Falcone's Duke wrestling team appeared to be heading for a successful season as the yearbook went to press. Led by Greg Raimondo, Otto Dieffenbach, Phil Accardo, Bob Malone, and Freshman Fred Campbell, the Blue Devil wrestlers took early season wins over N. C. State and Davidson.

They bowed to stronger teams from Navy, Maryland, and Washington and Lee. Since the team will lose only one man by June's graduation, prospects are good for next year.

Duke Harriers suffer rough season

After a promising start against Tennessee's fine team, to whom they lost by the close score of 26-30, the Blue Devil cross countrymen lost by somewhat wider margins to N. C. State, North Carolina, and Maryland. A fourth place in the Southern Conference meet finished their season. Prospects for the coming season look somewhat brighter with Bob Marshall, last year's captain, and John Tate, captain elect, returning, along with three other lettermen.

Duke's intramural sports program, one of the best in any of the leading universities, offers participation in a wide variety of athletics, ranging from football to badminton.

The SAE's walked off with last year's university basketball championship. The Sigma Chi's produced three teams which copped division titles, but all were defeated in the playoffs. Pi Kappa Phi's Bob Spivey won the spring tennis championship by defeating independent Norm Rosenbaum. Spivey then teamed with Rosenbaum and won the doubles title. In the handball championship, Delt C. Duttweiler defeated Farinella for the singles title and then the two teamed up to win the doubles crown. The KA's won the cross country team championship. Independent Kreuter won the individual event with a time of 9:12 and KA Loub placed second. Sigma Chi's "A" team won the volleyball and the SAE's took the softball title.

The KA's took the track title, Sigma Chi Bill Robinson won the horseshoe crown, and KA Ralph Paris took the badminton championship to round out last spring's intramural schedule. Both the Senhauser Award and the High Point Trophy were won by Pi Kappa Bob Spivey.

The KA's "A" team came out on top in the football competition. Bob Barfield upset last year's champion to win the fall tennis tournament. Couthlehurst and Hurlbert won the doubles.

With a huge cover stretched from the balcony across the entire floor, the lights turned down low, and shuffling feet dancing time to good music, the cavernous indoor stadium takes on an enchanting aspect. The floor is crowded, for this is one of the few affairs that brings out the students in mass. Some arrive at the beginning, others come later on, but almost no one fails to put in an appearance at some time during the evening.

It is one of the dances of the Shoe and Slipper weekend, a highlight of the semester, when a top name band comes to the campus and the students get a chance to dance to the best.

Womans' Gym

It's not an attractive building. In fact, some might call it ugly, with its bold, weather-beaten brick walls and strangely large windows. Not until you walk around to the front of it do you see any resemblance to symmetry or art. Then the long stone steps and white columns framing the three tall doors begin to reconcile you. You look at it as a part of the stately trees and well-kept grounds that surround it, and you begin to like what you see. You remember that it is sometimes a blaze of purple when the wisteria on the tennis court fences is in bloom. And when you think of the dances, the basketball games, the swims, the pageants and shows that are held within the walls of this gym, its ugliness is forgotten.

When you shook the hand of your opponent after winning the singles tennis tournament, you felt like a champ indeed.

You soon realized that athletics made your life fuller and more complete. You started taking advantage of the nights the bowling alley was open and practiced for precision. You began to take a break at five o'clock and work up an appetite by taking a quick swim. You participated in Duke's Play Day against teams from other women's colleges. You helped make your dorm's kite and flew it on Joe College Day. You rode every Sunday morning at 8:00 to perfect the drill for the Pegasus Horse Show.

You found a whole new world of excitement and enjoyment that was only waiting for you to look for it. There was the thrill of seeing your arrows hit the bullseye three times in a row. There was the feeling of accomplishment when you made a strike and watched the tenpins fall. There was the time when you sunk that putt for a par. There was the feeling of adventure as you cantered down the dirt road stretching before you. There was the elation of executing a perfect back dolphin. She swims; she dances; she rides; she runs; she does almost everything that young ladies do in the way of athletics. In fact, the Duke coed is a pretty active girl. Maybe she doesn't turn down a date in favor of tossing around the medicine ball, but she likes sports and finds time for them.

And for the sake of organization, she has a Women's Athletic Association. This W.A.A. does the planning, keeps the ball rolling, and makes the awards to the winners. It draws up the schedules, pitting sorority against sorority; house against house; girl against girl.

DUKE CAVALIERS HAVE BECOME FIRST DANCE BAND ON CAMPUS

They are a popular dance band on the campuses: Duke, State, and Carolina acclaim them. They appeared before Kay Kyser at the Pan Hel Benefit Show given in Chapel Hill. On New Year's Eve they played over a national hook-up from Roanoke, Va., on the program, "New Year's Dancing Party." At Duke they play for a great number of sorority, fraternity, and campus-wide dances. They are noted for their unusual and melodious arrangements and their solo numbers. Bill Byers, their competent leader, founded the band in 1948, when he organized a group of thirteen boys and a girl vocalist.

At that time, the competition was tough. It was the new and unknown struggling against the old and entrenched. But they played well. They played what the student wanted, the way the student wanted it played.

Gradually they caught on, gaining popularity and demand. Their reputation grew until today the byword for good music on the campus is the Duke Cavaliers.

Beauty Queen reigns at Coed Ball on Eve of Thanksgiving

Candy cane invitations announced the Coed Ball on Thanksgiving Eve. Twisting the usual order of things around a bit, the girls this time were the ones to take the initiative and issue the bids. Curiosity and suspense were at a high pitch as the frolickers entered the door and saw the pictures of all the candidates for CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen displayed around the lobby. Among gingerbread men, lollipops, and other inhabitants of the candy kingdom, the royal guests danced to the soft music of the Cavaliers.

Then all eyes turned towards the throne as the queen and her lovely court were escorted through the throng. For the rest of the dance she reigned as the most beautiful of them all.

"THERE'S MORE TO THIS THAN MEETS THE EYE"

What's in a beauty queen contest? Although most of us would consider beautiful girls as the prime requisite, to the editors of the CHANTICLEER this is the least of the worries. To them the first and most important problem is selecting a judge. Then the field has to be chosen and narrowed down, pictures made, balloting conducted. Finally it's the judge's turn. He says, "This is it," and everything's ready for the Coed Ball. On Thanksgiving Eve the well-kept secret is announced and the winner crowned. This is the climax, the end result of all that has gone before. Glory and admiration are hers. It is her moment.

Durham

Durham, the city that tobacco built . . . the city where the sun has to fight to cut through the tobacco smoke . . . the Home of Chesterfields . . . advertised as the city of Exciting Stores . . . Duke Power buses shuttling back and forth between campuses and town . . . electrical wires running along the streets, into every home—showing the handiwork of an electrical power magnate. . . . tall office buildings, black smokestacks, squat cigarette factories making Durham stand out against the sky . . . Hope Valley, with lovely homes and well-kept lawns . . . factory workers walking down the street, talking a language all their own . . . Five Points with its never ending lines of traffic . . . all this is part of Durham.

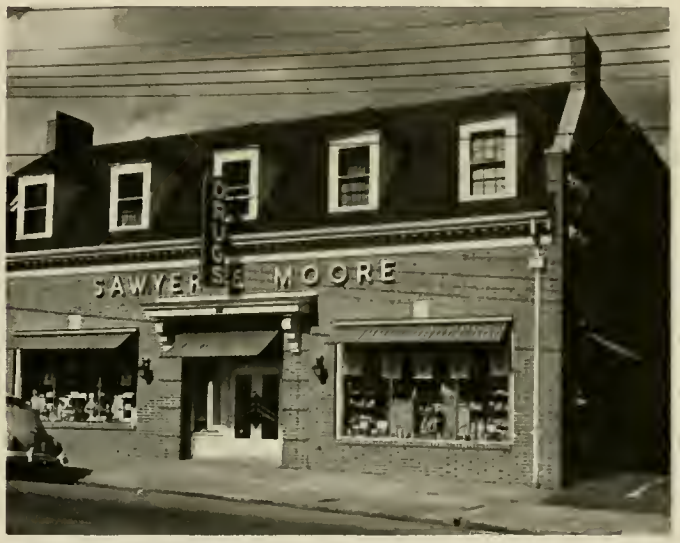
Busy, active, always moving, Durham becomes our second home. The churches in town open their doors wide and invite us to worship with them; Edgemont and the Durham Day Nursery offer invaluable experience of working with children while providing opportunities for service; the stores acquaint the Freshmen with their merchandise on Duke-Durham Day; the factories welcome tours through their departments.

Durham is countless railroad tracks. Some are abandoned, with boxcars sitting on them that look like they haven't been used since the tracks were laid. Trains running by East Campus interrupt classes and jar windows in Southgate. Durham is the familiar orange and black buses, too. They take us to Five Points, the movies, shopping. Policemen try to keep traffic moving the right way around the circle and motion pedestrians across when the light flashes.

The landmark in Durham is the Wash. Duke. We get our bearings by it, use it in giving directions, judge the location of stores, movies, restaurants by their distance from it. It is the center of our relations with Durham. Our parents stay there, our plane reservations are made there, our dates are entertained there in the Tavern.

Durham is the people that make it up. There are the factory workers; there are the busy housewives at the Super Market; there are the motley groups of people that ride the buses with us. There are the residents of Durham that come out to the Saddle Club or to Miller's and dance to the juke box. These are all a part of Durham—our home away from home for four years.

WASH DUKE HOTEL, with its tavern, news-and-novelty stand, comfortable lobby, and tailor shop, is favorite haunt of students. It stands on the windiest corner in Durham.



HIGHLY PATRONIZED by students is Sawyer & Moore drug and variety store near East Campus. Counters displaying everything from soup to nuts make it popular.

FAMILIAR TO DUKESTERS IS CHESTERFIELD PLANT, WORLD'S MOST MODERN CIGARETTE FACTORY.

WHEN THE BOOKS ARE AWAY

The City of Exciting Stores is home for profs, playground for students

DR. PHILLIPS ENTERTAINS A GROUP OF STUDENTS IN HIS HOME.

ATMOSPHERE OF RELAXATION, ENJOYMENT PREVAILS AT MILLER'S.

You were a part of Durham the minute you stepped off the plane that flew you in from New Jersey or the train that brought you from Miami. You're no longer a resident of Chicago or Greensboro—you're even counted in the Durham census.

The first memories you have of Durham are probably a cluster of large square buildings wrapped in smoke and fog. When the sun finally pierced the haze, you distinguished Chesterfield and Lucky Strike factories, stores, and Erwin Mills. If you drove your car, you probably got lost at Five Points and worried the Durham Police Force. And it's a safe bet that it's taken all year to figure out that West Campus is in the direction of the Blue Light and that the road from East to West goes underneath the main highway.

The first friends you made were probably at Bailey's and the Blue Light. Every time you took a break from the books, you headed to those all-time favorites. You soon found out where you could rent a tux and who could press your suit the fastest, where you could buy a corsage the cheapest, and which newsstand sold your home town paper.

It didn't take long to find your way around Durham streets, and you soon knew all the shortcuts to Cole's and the Chili House. You learned which side of the Bartlett House to sit on and what to order when your date wanted steak or lobster. You searched till you found where you could buy good $.90 club steak for lunch and the best fried chicken on Sundays. Somehow you kept it a secret where you could get quick service after the dances on Shoe and Slipper weekends and where your imported date could stay out the latest.

PHOTOGRAPHY AND FAMILY, rather than economics, occupy much of Dr. Saville's time outside of the classroom. At left, he and his wife entertain the two children. At right, he photographs them.

FAMOUS FOR STEAKS and popular as a Saturday night rendezvous, Hartman's holds high appeal in Duke circles.

PETE RINALDI'S GRILL, LOCATED NEAR EAST CAMPUS, IS A FAVORITE EATING PLACE FOR STUDENTS.

STUDENTS SOON DISCOVER THAT

JAM SESSIONS, featuring Dixieland Jazz Combo and some fast jitterbugging, shook the rafters at Turnage's on Saturday afternoons of spring semester.

All at once you found out that the professors weren't so bad after they folded up their lecture notes and that they were really human beings when you spoke to them at student-faculty coffees. But the times you really got to know them were when you visited them in their homes. You caught yourself listening to what they were saying and enjoying the hours spent with them instead of checking your watch every two minutes. You realized that they knew what they were talking about and that the University hadn't made a mistake when they put them on the staff.

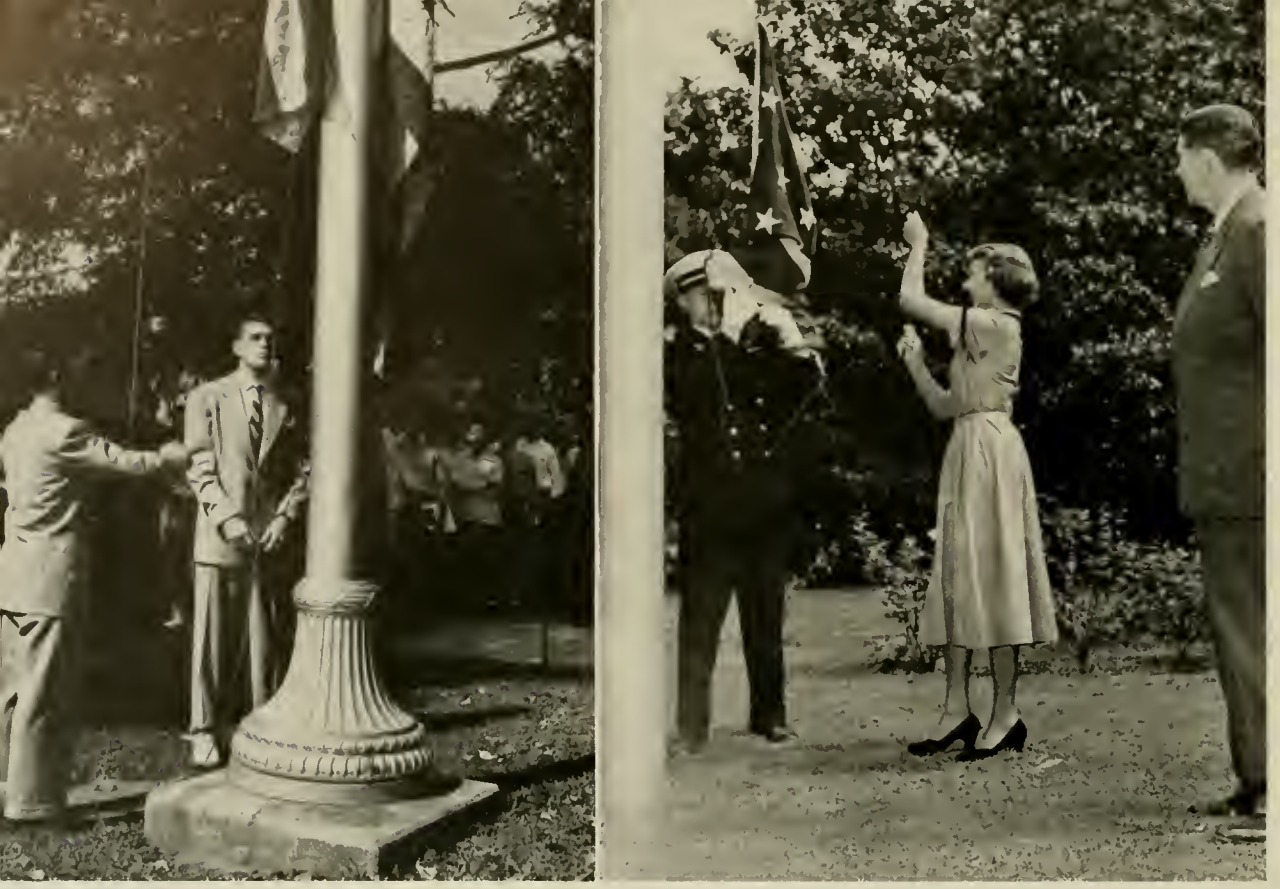
IT SPECIALIZES IN SPAGHETTI.

DR. AND MRS. BEVINGTON, associate and assistant professors in the English Dept., spend Sunday afternoon catching up on correspondence and reading.

DURHAM IS NOT SO BAD AFTER ALL

Visiting your professors and the family of the guy down the hall made you wake up to the fact that there were some pretty nice people in Durham. There were the same sorts of things going on that you were interested in back home. You began not to bury yourself in your home town newspaper all the time, but to glance at the Durham Sun and Morning Herald too. You learned where every theater in town was, and there were few good movies you missed. You know your way around Durham—you are a part of it.

FAVORITE HAUNT of Dukesters seeking escape from Gothic and Georgian atmosphere is the crowded Saddle Club. Couples sway to juke box's tunes.



FLAG RAISING ceremonies on both campuses mark official opening of school. Men's and women's senior class presidents preside, while NROTC students and University officials also take part.

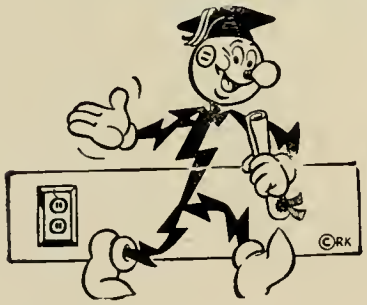
FINEST KIND OF RELAXATION

Relax after working hard; see a movie at your favorite theater — The CENTER or RIALTO. The finest of motion picture entertainment is offered here to Duke Students.

Noted for its excellent home-cooked meals, the HOSTESS, located at 1104 Broad Street, has become a favorite rendezvous for college students.



EDUCATED NOW?

To be sure you are, with a prized diploma to show for it! Congratulations on all those tests you've successfully passed.

Now life is going to give you the supreme test of thinking for yourself. You'll hear that the political planners can manage everything for you, and give you a "secure" life If you think that one through clearly, you will see that the most secure people you could find are the ones in jail

You'll probably hear more about your "rights" than you do about your responsibility Yet your teachers have warned you that every right carries with it an obligation equal or greater.

"Jahn & Ollier Again"

A familiar and reassuring slogan

FAMILIAR...because it has appeared in thousands of the country's finest yearbooks for the past half century.

REASSURING...because those years of specialized experience bring complete service, outstanding quality and dependable delivery to the yearbook staffs with whom we work.
